Roosevelt Says Senate Overstepped On Roberts

Asserts Members As Individuals Lack 'Veto' Power On Nominations

(The President's Letter, Page 28.)

President Roosevelt yesterday attacked the time-honored institution of "senatorial courtesy," which was largely responsible for the overwhelming 72-to-9 vote by which the Senate on Monday rejected the nomination of Floyd H. Roberts for Federal judge of the western Virginia judicial district.

In a letter to Roberts, which bids fair to become a historic document, he said senatorial courtesy, in effect, means appropriation by individual Senators to themselves of the nominating power vested by the Constitution in the President.

The Senate vote on the Roberts nomination—the most devastating defeat of a Presidential appointment on record—followed statements before the Senate Judiciary Committee by Senators Glass and Byrd, Virginia Democrats, that the selection of Roberts was "personally offensive" to them.

Charges Conspiracy

Glass charged that appointment of Roberts was part of a conspiracy to give to Gov. James H. Price a "veto power" over Federal patronage in Virginia and to "dishonor" the recommendations of the Virginia Senators, empowered by the Constitution to pass on appointments.

Roosevelt denied flatly Glass' statement that he had given Price the veto power over appointments in the State. He described as untrue a statement by Glass that former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings "never had the slightest idea of giving consideration to the recommendations of the Virginia Senators."

He recalled that Glass had told the Judiciary Committee the Roberts appointment was his answer to a question as to whether Price had been given a patronage veto. Glass asked the question in a letter to Roosevelt dated last March 17. This statement by Glass, Roosevelt said, "does not square with the facts."

Glass, after reading over the President's letter last night, said: "It's hardly worth discussing. There's nothing in it. But I may have something to say about it in the Senate later."

Byrd's Comment Brief

Byrd's only comment was:

"The President has had his say. We may have ours later."

Mr. Roosevelt concluded his letter by telling Roberts the rejection of his appointment perhaps would have "a good effect on the citizenship and thinking of the whole Nation in that it will tend to create a greater interest in the Constitution of our country—a greater interest in its preservation in accordance with the intention of the gentlemen who wrote it."

In response to questions as to whether he would make a new appointment to the Virginia judgeship, created by a bill introduced by Glass, the President replied that he had given no thought to the matter.

After he had hurriedly read his letter to reporters at his press conference, the President was asked whether he agreed with Benjamin Harrison, who, when he became President, announced that he would not consider Federal judgeships as Senatorial patronage. He said he thought Harrison was about right.

Views on Constitution

Outlining his own views of what the Constitution provides, he said the Senate as a whole, not Senators from a particular State, has the power to confirm or rejeet nominations.

Moreover, the President, holder of the appointive power, has traditionally received advice on appointments, not merely from Senators, but from such other sources as he saw fit, he added.

If the authors of the Constitution had intended to give individual Senators a veto over appointments, he declared, "it would have said so."

U. S. Judge-Elect Dies in Tennessee

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 7 (AP).—Death abruptly ended the career of William Baxter Lee today before he could realize an ambition of becoming a Federal judge.

The 59-year-old attorney fell dead of a heart ailment this morning in the private chambers of U. S. District Judge Taylor while discussing a lawsuit.

His appointment by President Roosevelt as a "roving" judge in the middle and eastern districts of Tennessee, a post created through the efforts of his long-time friend, Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, was confirmed last week by the Senate.

Amlie Hearing To End Today, Vote Delayed

Sub-committee Decision On ICC Choice to Take 'Long, Long Time'

By Robert C. Albright.

A Senate sub-committee, sharply divided on the qualifications of Thomas R. Amlie to sit on the Interstate Commerce Commission, today will close hearings on the contested nomination, but will indefinitely delay a vote.

"We are going to take a long, long time in reaching a conclusion," said Chairman Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, following a day in which the Wisconsin Progressive was accused of "paving the way for a socialistic state and defended as a "good American."

The five-man sub-committee appeared divided 2 for 2 against the nomination, with the deciding opinion of the chairman reported still in the balance. Regardless of the action of the Interstate Commerce Committee, a close vote was believed in prospect on the Senate floor.

Defended by Mayor LaGuardia, of New York and Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois—attacked by Wisconsin legislators and railroad and traffic witnesses—Amlie will be recalled to the stand this morning for cross-examination by Senator Austin (Republican), of New York.

Austin meanwhile disclosed that, at his request, action on the nomination of Dean Charles E. Clark, of the Yale Law School, to be judge of the Second Circuit Court of Ap-

Cord-Pullers Delay Thousands On New York 'El'

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Thousands of subway and "El" riders were delayed at the height of the morning rush hour today by an apparently concerted campaign to cripple service throughout the Interborough Rapid Transit system by the pulling of emergency cords.

Officials of the line said they suspected some offenders were discharged employes.

Delays of from 2 to 15 minutes were reported.

Police reported also that men were taking trains out of carbarns without permission.

'Emergency' Relief Asked By President

In $150,000,000 Plea He Makes Immediate Use of Permission In Slashed WPA Bill

With the declaration that "an emergency now exists," President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday—three days after the $725,000,000 relief bill became law—to restore the $150,000,000 sliced from his original request for funds to carry WPA through June.

Under the present reduced appropriation, a "very drastic" reduction in WPA rolls would be required, the Chief Executive warned. Asserting that more people would be thrown out of work than could be absorbed by industry "with any conceivable degree of recovery," he predicted that "widespread want or distress would inevitably follow."

The President thus took advantage of a provision in the relief act inviting him to submit to Congress an estimate for an additional appropriation if "an emergency" should arise.

Delay Indicated

The immediate reaction of the two key men in the House Appropriations Committee — Representatives Taylor (Democrat), of Colorado, and Woodrum, (Democrat), of Virginia —indicated little disposition to give an immediate hearing to the President's request.

Taylor, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, observed that "we have just finished with this and conditions haven't changed any." There is "nothing afire," he added.

Woodrum, chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the WPA bill, said "I don't know what the committee will do—or whether it will do anything. I don't see that there has been much change since we passed the bill."

Taber's Reply Bitter

The ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, Representative Taber, of New York, was bitter in his denunciation, asserting that "the President is showing his characteristic contempt of Congress—all he wants is subservience."

In contrast was the enthusiastic indorsement of the President's message by Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, second ranking member of the Appropriations Committee.

Cannon, who fought hard for the full $875,000,000 at the time of the President's original request, declared that "the situation is now on the doorstep of Congress. The President has done his part. Any need, any unemployment which develops is Congress' responsibility."

Adams' Stand Unchanged

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of the subcommittee corresponding to Woodrum's comment, said that "what I had to say about the relief business, I said on the floor." Adams, with Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, led the successful fight to slice the President's request from $875,000,000 to $725,000,000. The Colorado Senator declared that "if anybody has new facts, naturally we'll take them up."

Byrnes pointed out that the present law provides for the removal of 30,000 aliens from relief rolls, involving "a saving of $30,000,000 a year."

In his message, President Roosevelt revealed he had signed the $725,000,000 relief bill Saturday. He noted, however, that "I would have withheld my approval of this legislation on the ground of its inadequacy to meet human needs and I would immediately have asked for a larger sum" if it had not been for the provision forbidding a cut in the relief rolls greater than 5 per cent (150,000 workers) during February and March.

Radio Bridge Game Broadcast To Mark Serum 'Bank' Parties

Six of Washington's ranking bridge players will take part tomorrow night in a radio preview of the city-wide game and card parties to be held in the Nation's Capital St. Valentine's week for the benefit of a permanent blood and serum "bank" at Children's Hospital.

The six participants are:

Congressman John C. Kunkel, newly elected Republican member of the House of Representatives from Pennsylvania; Mrs. Winslow D. Van Devanter, chairman of the St. Valentine card parties ladies' committee; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, among the country's foremost husband-and-wife bridge combinations; Capt. Albert M. Guenther and Lieut. Comdr. William A. Corley, outstanding directors and referees of tournament bridge play.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemon will be paired against Representative Kunkel and Mrs. Van Devanter. They will play—the bidding and actual playing described and commented upon over the air by Capt. Guenther. He will be assisted by Lieut Comdr. Corley.

The special broadcast will be heard over Station WJSV at 6:45 p. m. Thursday.

"We are extremely fortunate," said Capt. Guenther yesterday, "in having available such a foursome for this demonstration. Mr. Lemon, president of the American Contract Bridge League, and his wife are, in my opinion, the strongest married combination in the country.

"In addition to that, they are widely known as the most agree-

Roosevelt Lauds District Reorganization

Griffenhagen Report Absorbs Score of Units Into 17 Departments

By James D. Secrest.

President Roosevelt yesterday commended the Griffenhagen reorganization plan for the District as a release of the detailed departmental proposals disclosed that the Alley Dwelling Authority, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the coroner's office would be abolished as separate units.

Asked at his press conference for comment on the District reorganization plan, the President said he had just received a copy of it and was waiting for some quiet evening to read it. From newspaper accounts, however, the report appears to be an earnest effort toward improvement of the District government, he added.

The second volume of the Griffenhagen report proposed absorption of more than a score of independent boards and commissions by the 17 departments. Some of the commissions that would be scrapped have only recently been established by Congress.

Among these is the Commission on Mental Health, set up last year to handle insanity cases. The report pointed out that the health department could perform the same functions by utilizing the staff of psychiatrists at Gallinger Hospital.

The supplemental report also disclosed that the Department of Vehicles and Traffic would be split

Takoma Park Wife Fails to Identify Attack Suspects

Takoma Park, Md., police released five suspects last nigh after a pretty young wife who had been criminally assaulted the night before failed to identify any of them as the assailant.

The 23-year-old woman, who lives in Takoma Park and works in a Washington store, was robbed of $11 and attacked in back of 200 Baltimore avenue, Takoma Park.

From his sickbed in Washington Sanitarium, State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson described the "shocking incident" as a "vivid portrayal of the need for additional police protection in Montgomery County." He added that he was asking for 15 extra police in a bill now pending. Acting State's Attorney James Christopher is investigating the case.

Bandits Make Six Close Eyes While They Take $2,300

Pittsburgh, Feb. 7 (AP).—Two gunmen bound four clerks, a customer and the manager today and escaped with $2,300 from the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.'s office.

Manager Charles Silver said the pair walked into his office and told him, "This is a stickup, nobody'll get hurt."

One of the men rounded up the clerks and the customer and told them:

"Close your eyes. As long as you keep them closed, nothing will happen to you. If you don't ——."

'Free Spain' Or Risk War, Paris Warns

Bonnet Warns Axis

By Walter B. Kerr.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Feb. 7.—Foreign Minister Bonnet warned Germany and Italy tonight that a threat to the integrity of Spain was a threat to the security of France and might provoke the long-dreaded second world war.

In the announcement, probably the most important in French foreign affairs for years, he laid down this law: That intervention in Spain would have to stop as soon as the civil war ended.

Great Britain, Bonnet told the Senate, was in full agreement with France on this point, and the implication was clear that an attack on Spanish independence would bring into play the British-French military collaboration of which Prime Minister Chamberlain spoke yesterday.

After Bonnet's speech, the Senate voted confidence, 290 to 16, in the government's foreign policy.

Refers to United States

Bonnet spoke with a force that caused astonishment on the Senate floor and in the visitors' gallery. It was a long talk, in which many references were made to the collaboration among France, Britain and the United States, but the meat was contained in these words:

"Gentlemen, Spain, by its geographical position, is of capital strategic importanee for us because of our communications with our North African empire. We cannot allow any foreign state to menace the integrity of Spain and thus the security of France.

"The Burgos government, which last September notified us of its neutrality in case of war, has affirmed publicly and made known to us that it would jealously maintain the independence of Spain and would accept no foreign hold upon itself. In its accord with England, the government of Rome affirmed that it was seeking no territorial or political objective in metropolitan Spain, nor in the islands, nor in the Spanish colonies.

"Finally, the British government, to which we have specifically put the question, has made known to us that it was in full agreement with France to assure the independence of Spain.

Must Keep Engagements

"What France wants, gentlemen, is simply that these engagements be kept."

Bonnet went right down the line for a firm foreign policy and in this respect his talk differed from preceding speeches, just as yesterday Chamberlain seemed to have departed from his policy of peaceful words softly spoken. This is how Bonnet defined the objective of France's foreign policy:

"First of all, we intend to safeguard our territory and our empire. What the work and blood of Frenchmen have created, the courage of Frenchmen will defend. We have received from our ancestors a heritage; we should pass it on intact to our descendants. On this there is no doubt, no shadow and no disagreement among Frenchmen."

He renewed his previous statement that France held to its obligations in eastern Europe, to the Soviet-French and Polish-French pacts and to friendship with other nations.

Roosevelt Denies Army Gave Britain Gun Secret

President Roosevelt again slapped back at Senate critics of his foreign policy yesterday, describing as unpatriotic originators of a story that the Army had given away military secrets.

As the Senate Military Affairs Committee prepared to vote this morning on a motion to publish secret testimony taken in an inquiry on French plane sales, the President told his press conference that a story that the Army, with his approval, was furnishing the British with antiaircraft directors was a fake.

Absolving the press from any blame, the President declared it was a rotten thing for anyone to give out misinformation for publication, adding that it was unpatriotic and a raw deal to the press and the American public. The story had declared that the information came from a Senate source.

He particularly stressed another phase of the article attributed to the same source, to the effect that the United States possessed a detector for airplanes which it was not giving away. If the United States did have such a valuable military weapon, the President declared, this revelation of its existence was an open invitation to foreign spies to go after details of it.

Tomorrow's expected flare-up over foreign policy will not materialize if Senate Majority Leader Barkley prevails. Barkley said he plans to move for another three-day Senate recess. Barkley said he

Hit-Runners Hurt 2 More; Storm Rises

Congress Car Sought; Cabbie Nabs Woman; House Calls Chief; Pedestrian Rule Set

Members of Congress joined District Commissioners yesterday in a series of moves to halt the wave of hit-run accidents here as three more runaway drivers in the District area left two injured persons in their wake.

An auto with Congressional tags was involved in one of the accidents.

Developments as the hit-run mark rose to six in five days were:

A woman motorist, captured by a cab driver, was charged with driving while intoxicated and leaving the scene of an accident after her car had allegedly struck an 18-year-old youth standing in a safety zone. She was released on $1,500 bond.

Congressional Car Sought

Police broadcast a lookout for an Arkansas automobile bearing Congressional tags after a motorist reported his machine had been hit by the fleeing car.

An Arlington man was in critical condition at Georgetown Hospital after he had been felled on Lee highway by a nonstop driver.

Representative Schulte, of Indiana, appeared at police headquarters to demand "open warfare" against reckless motorists. He urged a standing reward to aid capture of hit-runners and that runaway killers be forced to spend at least 24 hours at the District Morgue with their victims.

Representative Reece, of Tennessee, introduced a bill requiring the District Commissioners to establish a medical board of examiners for testing drivers suspected of being under the influence of liquor.

The Commissioners announced adoption of a stringent, fine-enforced pedestrian control law, to take effect in ten days.

Latest Hit-Run Victim

Representative Randolph, of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, called Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown and Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer to appear before his committee today for a "full discussion" of the traffic problem.

Representative Seccombe, of Ohio, prepared to seek from the House District Committee today a permanent reward of $1,000 for information leading to arrest of any hit-run driver.

The latest hit-run injury victim was Peter Donch, 18, of 1420 Harvard street northwest. He was struck down, police reported, while standing in a safety zone in the 2900 block of Fourteenth street northwest. An alert taxi driver, Frank Riley, 492 F street southwest, who said he saw the accused motorist drive off, gave chase and captured her after three blocks.

Tenth Precinct police said the woman gave her name as Mrs. Vera

Pope Plans Part In Week-End Fete Despite Influenza

Vatican City, Feb. 7 (AP).—Pope Pius XI, confined to his bed by a mild case of influenza, today was determined to go through with a strenuous week-end program celebrating the anniversaries of the Lateran Accord of 1929 with Italy and his coronation in 1922.

A Vatican news service reported at 9:15 p. m., that the Pope's condition was unchanged. He canceled all audiences today chiefly to conserve his strength.

His medical attendants indicated they did not regard his condition as dangerous.

MILO C. McDONNELL

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Feb. 7.—Milo McDonnell, the perspiring papa who has been pacing a corridor more than 60 hours since his son was born, got a real blow from the doctor tonight—the news that it may be ten days before a prospective twin arrives.

"It's too tough going," McDonnell said wearily. "I can't do it ten days more. I'll have to sit down a while, at least."

The mother took it more calmly, saying she could stand the wait if her husband could.

Doctors explained the first child was born prematurely, that the twin might be delayed till the normal date of birth some ten days hence.

Papa McDonnell, a bookkeeper, had company on his turns about the corridor today in the person of papa-to-be W. F. Wiedenmann, a trust company clerk.

"This is my first time," Wiedenmann confided, hippety-hopping a little 4o get in step with the self-appointed pace of McDonnell. "Boy, what a terrible experience this is for me."

"Your second will be just as bad, my friend," McDonnell countered. "I well remember how bad I thought I felt last Sunday when my first was born. This is no better."

Triplets Are F., D., R.; WPA May Promote Pa

By the Associated Press.

Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 7.—Triplets that arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Janney in Kenna on President Roosevelt's birthday may bring their father a better WPA job.

Janney wrote WPA District Administrator E. B. Pugh today that he had named the three boys Franklin, Delano and Roosevelt. Said Pugh:

"I am going to ask the proper authorities to certify Janney for a good WPA job. He ought to have a promotion."

Tonight Franklin was getting along fine and so was Roosevelt in a Ripley, W. Va., hospital, but the doctor said Delano had only a 50-50 chance to live.

The morning they were born only Mrs. Janney's 75-year-old mother was in the house and she was just recovering from a broken leg.

She helped with the first baby and called for Mrs. Ora Gandy, midwife, who left her own two children ill of pneumonia and rode a mile and a half on horseback to reach the two-room house.

Dr. C. Royal Kessel said he "went to the house as soon as I could be summoned."

The babies each weighed 3½ pounds.

The Department of Public Assistance has arranged to care for the other Janney children, 7, 5, 4 and 2 years old.

High Official Reported Held in Jury Fixing Case

Relieved of Job, Not Home in 3 Nights; Name May Be Tied To Warrings' Today

A highly-placed official was reported in custody early today on suspicion of complicity in tampering with the jurors in the second Warring conspiracy trial. His name may be revealed at 10 a. m. today when charges that one or more of the three brothers, tycoons of a $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket, tried to influence jurors are taken up at a hearing before Justice Laws.

The official reported in custody was said not to have been at his home for three nights. It was known he was relieved of his Government duties Monday.

"I can not comment on any phase of this investigation until it has been completed," District Attorney Pine replied to a question about the reported arrest.

The Warrings and Gordon L. R. Sadur, their income tax expert and co-defendant who was not involved in the jury scandal, were ordered to be in court at 10 a. m., when District Attorney Pine said yesterday he expected to file contempt charges based on alleged attempted bribery of the jurors.

Other developments in the Government's war against the numbers racket were:

The second trial of the Warrings and Sadur on charges of plotting to cheat the Treasury out of income taxes on Warring profits was declared a mistrial. The first ended with a hung jury last fall.

Quijano Trial Today

Justice Adkins rejected the claim of one of five men indicted for criminal conspiracy and running a numbers lottery that the 10,000 slips police got from his car were seized unlawfully.

Attorney Juan R. Quijano and five other persons were due to go to trial in District Court today on nine counts of numbers violation and one of criminal conspiracy to violate the law, furtherance of which 23 overt acts were charged.

Sidney Harris, 30, whom Assistant District Attorney Tarver called his "key witness" against Quijano, awaited action on his case. He was arrested in Quijano's apartment.

Delay Puzzles Jurors

Justice Laws called off the second Warring trial in a brief session yesterday morning.

The jurors, one woman, 11 men and two men alternates, filed into the box, puzzled over why they had heard no evidence since Saturday. They have been in close custody at all times court was not sitting since the trial began.

Justice Laws said:

"I have concluded that it is my duty to declare a mistrial. . . . Certain information has been brought to my attention which indicates that an effort might have been made to influence the decision of jurors. . . .

"I think it proper to say to you, members of the jury, that in the event any one of you has information in regard to the matters now under investigation, you should immediately report it to the district attorney or to counsel for the defense. . . ."

New Trial Date Deferred

Pine recommended that setting a time for the third Warring trial be deferred until "the contempt charges are disposed of," and said he would submit those today. Justice Laws ordered the charges prepared immediately if contempt was exposed by the investigation.

Justice Laws then ordered the Warrings to be in court today. They are free on bonds totaling $150,000, raised Monday from $15,000.

The jurors, free of custody for the first time in almost six days, scrambled to get newspapers to find out "what was going on." Several who were asked about the investigation said they were surprised. All asked

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Dear Mr. President:

Did one of those movie stars you had at your house last week tell you about the funny thing he heard at the Racquet Club in New York? He was invited there (quite by accident) and overheard a man at the next steam cabinet say:

The President . . . columnist?

"Egad, this country's founded on the philosophy of insecurity! The West was conquered by jobless men!"

'Pon my word, Lionel Stander says he heard that. Maybe insecurity is what we ought to aim at; perhaps the gilded gent at that swanky club has a straight tip that the jobless are a national asset.

* * * *

My barber thinks that for a man who hasn't had much business experience you're pretty cagy to sell those planes to France while she's in a mood to pay for 'em. Later on she might change her mind and ask us to charge 'em to Lafayette.

* * * *

What's worse, later on she might insist we send American pilots over to demonstrate 'em above the enemy lines. Selling our first mass production planes abroad would be like Henry Ford exporting his first $0.00 Model-T flivvers when he was learning how to make 'em.

"—while Lafayette's in the mood"

A taxi driver explained to me that they're fighting a new kind of war over there nowadays. It consists of scaring each other into not fighting, like the savages who used to paint their faces to upset each other's nerves.

* * * *

Only they use planes instead of warpaint. If we can help 'em keep the peace by selling 'em planes to frighten each other, why not, f. o. b.? Reserving the right to decide ourselves who needs frightening worst. Are we men or are we mice?

* * * *

Well, sir, it was like old times to (Continued on page 5) you use the "short and ugly word" about the Senate yarn that you had put our frontier on the Rhine. Your uncle Teddy used to call someone a liar every once in awhile. Maybe you should revive the Ananias Club. But why blame the papers for printing what Senators tell 'em? After all, a newspaperman can't call a Senator a liar; only a President can do that.

I'm sorry you let your Ambassador at Rome protest against the dirty lingo about you in the Italian papers. Better let Benito's stooges have their fun; they can't hurt you.

* * * *

It's all over town that Mrs. Roosevelt's syndicate is trying to sign you up to write a column, too. So I want to tip you off, if you're going to be a columnist, that the best ideas will always come to you when you're shaving. Some of us columnists have to shave two and three times a day without results. . .

* * * *

Before you sign on the dotted line better get the syndicate to cough up for a dictaphone, and have it right beside you while you're shaving.

Then after you're all lathered up and the inspiration begins to flow you can pour it right into the mouthpiece, with "ants in their pants" when you start up by your right ear, and "dictation from the White House" as you round the curve at the chin, and "encroachment by the Executive" as you reach the home stretch under your left ear. Sounds easier than it is, though.

"—thoughts while shaving"

I'm glad you finally got around to having a lot of Senators and Representatives over, like I suggested in my last letter. I'm always surprised the way people working on the same problem don't ever get together here.

* * * *

I'll bet Senator Tydings has never heard Tommy Corcoran play the accordion, and Dies and Ickes never ate lunch together, and I doubt that Senator Bilbo, of the lynching filibuster, has even met Walter White who's one-sixty-fourth Negro.

* * * *

But I'm surprised that you tried to tell the Senators some secrets. Who do you think they are, reporters? A Senator doesn't have any inhibitions. The difference between a Senator and a newspaperman is that a newspaperman knows more than he can print, while a Senator—well, you finish it . . . Yours for sending our planes abroad and keeping our boys at home,

Most respectfully,

Harlan Miller

Biggest Surety Firm Sees No Limit on Size

Five Billions in Assets Benefit Policyholders, Metropolitan Head Says

The Monopoly Committee heard testimony yesterday that the size of the world's largest life insurance company had operated to the advantage rather than disadvantage of its policyholders.

In making this assertion, Frederick H. Ecker, chairman of the board of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., told the committee it was true primarily because the more policyholders the company had, the lower the percentage of overhead and the greater the diversification of its interests.

Earlier he had described growth of the company's assets from $176,000,000 in 1906 to $4,942,000,000 at the end of 1937. For the last 10 years, he said, the company had paid out an average of $100,000,000 annually in dividends to policyholders.

No Limit to Size

Asked whether he felt the company should continue to increase in size, the trim, gray-haired executive said:

"I haven't fixed in my mind any place where it would be unsafe to continue. I believe the policyholder is better protected now than when we had $176,000,000 in assets, and I believe we should continue to grow and give the same protection."

From the nature of the organization, Ecker added, the company "can't stand still—it must either go forward or go backward."

The problem of finding desirable investments for the company's huge reservoir of savings "hasn't gotten troublesome yet," Ecker testified, although "there is a limited field of investment for life insurance funds."

Invests $2,000,000 a Day

The company, Ecker estimated, invests on the average about $2,000,000 a day.

The witness testified that the company changed from a stock corporation to a mutual organization in 1915 because the rapid growth of its assets created the possibility that its stock might fall into the hands of persons who would operate the corporation for their own benefit rather than that of the stockholders.

Declining to generalize for all companies, Ecker asserted that the mutual system had held many advantages in the case of the Metropolitan.

Pittman Doubts Neutrality Act Discussion Today

Chairman Key Pittman last night called a meeting of his Senate Foreign Relations Committee for this morning but expressed doubt that either proposed revision of the neutrality act or lifting of the Spanish arms embargo will be considered.

Pittman expressed belief some peace agreement will be concluded in Spain "in the next few days" in which case he said the embargo would be a "dead issue."

The Foreign Relations chairman said he had received no proposals from the State Department on any suggested change in the neutrality act.

Public Favors Roosevelt Plan to End Tax Exemption on Government Bonds, Pay

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Feb. 7.—President Roosevelt's recent proposal to remove Federal income tax exemptions from Government bonds and to tax the salaries of State and local officeholders is favored by a large majority of the Nation's voters in a cross-section survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP.

A bill was introduced in the House last week to tax State and local Government workers, who are at present immune from the Federal income levy. Separate legislation is planned to end the tax exemptions on all future Government bonds. The public's attitude toward both these measures is indicated in the Institute's surveys on these two issues:

"Do you think people who work for the State and local governments should pay Federal income taxes on their salaries?"

Yes	67%
No	13

"Should people who own United States Government bonds or State or municipal bonds have to pay Federal income taxes on their incomes from these securities?"

Yes	75%
No	25

The President has twice called for legislation to remove the tax exemptions. He argues that persons who earn their livelihood from Government "should bear the same tax burden" as those in private jobs, and also that "a fair and progressive income tax" could not exist side by side with a "huge perpetual reserve of tax-exempt bonds." Although State and local governments have raised protests against the proposed legislation, the country's voters apparently share the President's views. The most frequently cited reason for favoring taxes on the salaries of all officeholders is that "they should not have privileges which others don't have."

The chief reasons why voters favor taxing Government bonds is that the owners of such securities can afford to pay taxes, that they are receiving a guaranteed income, and that because "people buy Government bonds to escape taxation" the Government should "plug up the loophole."

Some voters argued, however, that the national, State and local governments would have greater difficulty borrowing money if the tax exemptions were removed.

The main opposition to taxing Government securities comes from voters in the upper income class, the survey shows. But even there a majority favor the idea in principle.

Tax Government Bonds?	Yes	No
Upper income group	69%	31%
Middle income group	73	27
Lower income group	81	19

There has been much controversy in Washington over whether the courts would uphold taxes on State and local officeholders or on Government securities. A long line of judicial decisions has held that Congress possesses no Constitutional power to levy such taxes, and many jurists think a constitutional amendment would be necessary.

The indications from the Institute survey are that, if such an amendment were put to the people, ratification would not be difficult.

peals, has been held up by a Judiciary sub-committee. Austin said he wanted to examine thoroughly written articles by the law school dean. Clark supported the President's court plan.

Amlie yesterday was attacked by:

Luther M. Walter, a trustee of the Chicago Great Western Railroad, who lengthily quoted from Amlie's two pamphlets on "The Forgotten Man," and accused the nominee of advocating socialism, a capital levy, confiscatory taxes and nullification of the bill of rights and the due process clause of the Constitution.

Robert C. Fulbright, of Houston, Tex., representing the Southern Industrial Traffic League, said that organization went on record against confirmation of Amlie because it felt he lacks necessary experience and favors Government ownership of railroads.

H. D. Shatford, chairman of the Railroad Owners Association, said he thought Amlie would exercise a "destructive" influence on the Interstate Commerce Commission.

W. E. Donley, former member of the Wisconsin Legislature, read from an unsigned letter accusing Amlie of attending a Communist meeting in Chicago in 1934, where he was addressed as "Comrade Amlie." He said the letter was sent him by Senator Harry Bolens, of the Wisconsin Legislature, and he had no knowledge of who wrote it.

To Amlie's defense came:

Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who wrote a letter to Johnson attesting to Amlie's "sincerity, zeal and personal and intellectual integrity." LaGuardia, who served with Amlie in the old House Progressive bloc, said he is conscientious and patriotic in addition to being a "good American."

Representative Keller, who also served with Amlie in the House, took the witness stand to say the nominee is an honest man, a man of courage, an original thinker and "in every sense would be a valuable member of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

House Means Group Indorses Tax for U.S. Pay

Approval Comes After LaGuardia Attacks President's Proposal

If the Federal Government wants to be "helpful" about taxation, New York's Mayor LaGuardia declared yesterday before a special Senate tax committee, it should forget President Roosevelt's request that income from State and municipal securities be subjected to levies and "start to work immediately" on a plan to pool all activities of the tax collection agencies now in operation.

Legislation to subject all governmental employes—Federal, State and municipal—to Federal and State income tax laws was approved later in the day by the House Ways and Means Committee, which postponed consideration of the securities income tax plan scored by LaGuardia and a group of municipal finance experts.

The House measure, based on the President's recommendations to Congress, would exempt from retroactive Federal taxation incomes of those State employes who are considered taxable under recent Supreme Court decisions.

Tax Held Insufficient

In addition to one tax collection agency, provided with a "method for proportionate refund," Mayor LaGuardia proposed a Federal tax on interest above 2 per cent received from State and municipal bonds, the money thus collected to be returned to the issuing source.

He said the proposal to tax State and municipal bonds "would not produce the revenue anticipated and it would work a great damage on municipalities." He declared that it "would simply add another tax without helping the economic situation a whit."

"If the plan is to tax only new issues, no one would buy them; and if it would include refundings as new issues, States and municipalities would find themselves in a terrible plight."

He expressed doubt that New York could go ahead with a proposed bond issue of $300,000,000 if the plan were approved.

Says U. S. Would Profit

A report presented by Dr. Harley L. Lutz, public finance professor at Princeton University, at the request of Morris S. Tremaine, New York State Comptroller, said the States would lose $96,000,000 a year by elimination of the present tax exemptions.

Dr. Lutz said the States would receive only $17,000,000 additional each year if allowed to tax Federal securities and that Federal taxation of State securities would cost them a minimum of $113,000,000.

His report said the Federal Government would gain $204,000,000 a year in revenue, if it could tax both State and Federal securities, but, it was added, would lose $187,000,000 in added interest costs—leaving only $17,000,000 as the "profit."

"Very few people invest in Government bonds to escape taxation. The Government could not expect to gain anything except from persons with incomes above $60,000, according to my study."

N. Y. Brokers Buy 20 Per Cent Of D. C. Tax Deeds

New York tax brokers who recently "invaded" the local delinquent tax sales have acquired more than 20 per cent of the tax deeds on properties offered for sale, statistics compiled by Tax Collector C. M. Towers revealed yesterday.

The District in the annual January tax sale, collected $440,124.53 from both District and New York brokers for 4,850 separate parcels of land delinquent in taxes.

Owners may redeem their property from the brokers within two years by payment of the bill plus penalties.

CHANDLER

At 23, William E. Chandler, secretary to Representative Joseph R. Bryson, of South Carolina, holds title as "baby secretary" at the Capitol. Chandler started as a page boy for Bryson in the South Carolina State Senate in 1932. Certain his "boss" would eventually be sent to Congress, Chandler came to Washington in 1932 to prepare himself to be a Congressional secretary. When Bryson came to Washington in January to take his seat in Congress for the first time, Chandler won the appointment as his secretary.

Allen J. Ellender, jr., son of Senator and Mrs. Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, may be envied by autograph collectors on his eighteenth birthday today.

His father planned to present him with a leather-bound volume of Washington's "Farewell Address" containing the signatures of President Roosevelt, all Justices of the Supreme Court, all members of the Cabinet, and all 96 members of the last Senate.

Young Ellender is a premedical student at Virginia Military Institute.

Representative Dunn (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, asked Congress yesterday to appropriate $30,000,000,000 to "furnish employment and to end poverty" in the United States and its possessions for all time.

He proposed in a bill that the money be spent over five years for public projects such as flood prevention, erosion control, slum clearance, home building and stream pollution prevention, and for public acquisition of railroads and other utilities.

Employes on the projects would work 30 hours a week, receive at least 75 cents an hour and get a one-month vacation with pay each year.

Four Senators are going to become experts on Naval Academy activities. They are Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia; Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia; White (Republican), of Maine, and Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, appointed by Vice President Garner to the academy board of visitors.

Friends reported that Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, who went to a hospital with the grippe last week, would return to his office tomorrow.

The 73-year-old legislator was described as eager to participate in debate on foreign policy whenever it is resumed.

Capt. Frank N. Roberts, one of the heroes of the sinking of the Panay in China, was the guest of honor at a luncheon in the Speaker's dining room in the Capitol.

The luncheon was arranged by Representative Lambertson (Republican), of Kansas, in whose district Capt. Roberts lived at Oskaloosa before he entered West Point. Other invited guests included Secretary of War Woodring, a Kansan, and Kansas members of Congress.

50 Billion Debt Held No Danger By Morgenthau

Total Would Exceed by $5,000,000,000 the Present Limitation

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau told a Congressional committee, it was learned yesterday, that the national debt would reach $50,000,000,000 and could do so without danger to the country's financial structure.

Such a total would be $5,000,000,000 in excess of the current limitation on the public debt and informed House members said that would necessitate raising the limit.

Morgenthau's statement, made to a House Appropriations subcommittee considering the Treasury-Postoffice supply bill, provoked considerable discussion.

Statement Challenged

Members said the Secretary's statement that the huge debt should be assumed without danger was challenged immediately in the committee.

Although the appropriations committee has no jurisdiction over the law dealing with debt limitation, there were indications the Secretary's remarks may provde the basis for a lively House debate on the Administration's fiscal policies when the Treasury-Postoffice bill reaches the floor, possibly next week.

Meanwhile, Morgenthau said yesterday that American purchases of silver had stimulated buying power in a half dozen nations, and added that to stop such purchases would tend to reduce exports from this country.

Says It Increases Purchases

He testified as a special Senate committee headed by Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, opened an inquiry into operations of the silver purcahse act. Under this act, the Treasury buys the monetary metal both in the domestic and world markets.

By its foreign purchases, Morgenthau disclosed, the Treasury had been instrumental in increasing the buying power of such silver producing countries as China, Mexico, Canada, Peru, Chile and the Philippine Islands.

Pressed by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, as to the possibility that Mexican silver still was finding its way into this country, Morgenthau said he had no knowledge of this since the Treasury broke off an agreement with Mexico last March under which it was taking $5,000,000 of silver monthly.

4 Senators Fear Monopoly Move in Fixing Farm Prices

Four Senators criticized a proposed new farm bill yesterday on the ground it might increase monopolistic trends in the purchase and processing of agricultural products.

Senators Norris (Independent), Nebraska; Gillette (Democrat), Iowa; Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, and Lucas (Democrat), Illinois, raised the question at a hearing of the Senate Agriculture Committee when Louis B. Ward, of Detroit, asked that Federal powers be used to fix minimum prices for 50 agricultural products.

Chairman Jones (Democrat), of Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, introduced a bill to reduce by 25 per cent any farm benefit payment above $1,000, and limit any payment to $5,000 annually.

Strecker Denies Right of U. S. To Deport Him

Joseph G. Strecker, of Hot Springs, Ark., told the Supreme Court yesterday the evidence was "insufficient" to sustain a deportation warrant against him on the ground the Communist Party of which he was once a member advocates the overthrow of the Government by force.

Whitney North Seymour, of New York, counsel for the Austrian-born Strecker, filed his brief in advance of arguments before the high court, probably Friday.

"Even if it be assumed . . . that the Communist Party was an organization advocating the overthrow of the Government by force," he asserted, "the statute does not authorize the deportation of one who had ceased to be a member substantially before commencement of deportation proceedings."

4 Witnesses Say Chavez Kin Used WPA Job Threats

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 7 (AP).—Four Government rebuttal witnesses brought the Federal WPA conspiracy trial to a climax today with testimony that Stanley W. P. Miller, son-in-law of Senator Chavez, directly threatened or denied them WPA jobs unless they "lined up" politically.

Their testimony closed the case. Tomorrow the jury will hear summation by counsel.

The defense, with more than 50 witnesses still on call, unexpectedly rested, after using a little more than a day and a half to present its case in behalf of 25 defendants remaining on trial of the original 47 indicted.

Builder Called On Bankrupt Deal Involving Manton

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Joseph E. Gilbert, one of the builders of River House, East River residence of the wealthy, was summoned from Los Angeles to testify before the grand jury investigating the business affairs of Martin T. Manton, who stepped down today from the U. S. Circuit Court bench.

The Prudence Co., bankrupt mortgage guaranty firm, held a $4,000,000 mortgage on the luxurious development, U. S. Attorney Noonan disclosed.

District Attorney Dewey alleged in a letter to the House Judiciary Committee, that Manton recommended John M. McGrath as trustee in reorganization for the Prudence Co., and that McGrath gave Manton $12,000, which never was repaid.

William J. Fallon, former Prudence Co. associate and alleged "close associate of Judge Manton" who is now serving an indeterminate sentence for commercial bribery, was questioned today. Dewey charged Fallon induced Charles A. Rogers, insurance broker, to lend Manton $10,000 on promise he would get the insurance business of the Kings Brewery Co., of which a partner of Manton was a trustee in reorganization.

Thousands Paid Hines for Aid, Davis Testifies

Lawyer Says Tammany Chief Received Money For Protection

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 7.—J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, former attorney for the Dtuch Schultz policy racket, testified today he had paid Tammony District Leader James J. Hines thousands of dollars for political protection for the syndicate.

Appearing as a guilty-pleading prosecution witness in Hines' second trial on policy racket conspiracy charges, Davis swore he had given Hines "15 or 20" protection payments during 1933, ranging from $500 to $2,000, and that after a police raid on one of the policy "banks" George Weinberg, a Schulitz lieutenant and recent suicide, had wanted the case dismissed.

Hines, said the witness, suggested the case be adjourned until City Magistrate Hulon Capshaw was sitting. This was done, Davis added, and Capshaw dismissed the complaint.

Another key witness who pleaded guilty, "Big Harry" Schoenhaus, acknowledging on the defense cross-examination that he had decided to testify for the State to "'save his own skin," was unable to recall the location of any Weinberg policy bank in New York after October, 1935. The prosecution contended Hines received protection payments up to October, 1936.

Extension of Hines' alleged offenses into 1936, if established, would prevent the statute of limitations from operating against the conspiracy charge, a misdemeanor, in the indictment against him.

Davis' testimony, mainly a reiteration of what he said in Hines' first trial, also covered his earlier assertion that he personally gave Hines $12,000 to $15,000 of the policy racket's funds for the 1933 campaign of William C. Dodge, successful Tammany candidate for district attorney.

Loyalists Spurn Franco Terms; To Fight On

Del Vayo Says They Can Hold Madrid Area For Months

By the Associated Press.

Perpignan, France, Feb. 7.—Spanish government officials announced tonight that the hard-pressed Juan Negrin Cabinet had decided to continue defense of the one-fourth of Spanish soil still in its hands.

The announcement indicated insurgent Gen. Franco had repeated his demand for unconditional surrender to end the 30-month civil war—an insistence which brought a breakdown in peace negotiations.

The government's decision to fight on was made known shortly after Julio Alvarez del Vayo, foreign minister of the Spanish government, conferred at Perpignan with members of the Cortes (Parliament) and then hastily crossed the border for a conference with Premier Negrin.

"Our government which is the result of the people's will, has decided to pursue the fight to the end," said Alvarez del Vayo tonight.

Can Fight for Months

"The means at our disposal in the central zone can permit us to prolong the fight for some months."

The insurgents were said to have remained adamant in refusing the government's last condition for peace—safe conduct from Spain for leaders of leftist parties, labor unions and military forces who are now in the central government zone.

The insurgents already had turned down Negrin's three-point overture calling for assurances that a plebiscite would be held for choice of a new Spanish government that Italian and German influence would be removed from Spain and that all Spaniards would be permitted to join in the work of reconstruction.

Reports came from central Spain that Gen. Jose Miaja, commander in the Madrid-Valencia zone, was determined on a fight to the finish and was convinced the government was in "splendid position" to continue the struggle despite the loss of Catalonia.

France Refuses Assurances

France and Britain were reported by diplomats to have sought the safe conduct assurances from the conquering insurgents. Franco's refusal apparently was conveyed through British representatives.

British and French envoys had been in constant touch with Spanish government and insurgent authorities. They had whittled down the government's conditions for surrender to the request that civil and military leaders be spared, but Franco was unyielding.

Negrin's cabinet and labor and military leaders were assembled here while the premier remained inside the last narrowing strip of Catalonia along the border of France.

(The Spanish government embassy in London announced the Negrin government would go to Valencia "before the end of the week" to "resist to the end.")

Spanish government customs guards cleared the refugee-jammed road at Le Perthus this afternoon and halted the exodus of government soldiers for a time to evacuate units of the international brigade, including antifascists Italians, Czechs, Latin Americans and 37 United States citizens.

The soldiers raised their hands in the Communist salute for French Gen. Alfredo Fagalde, who reviewed them with the members of the international committee superintending the evacuation.

May Recognize Franco

London, Feb. 7 (AP).—There were reports in official circles tonight that Britain and France might recognize the Franco regime as the sole official government of Spain as a means of ending the civil war.

Nazi Ire at Her Ideas Surprises Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt is surprised, but not flattered, that German newspapers have taken exception to some of her recent statements regarding democracies and dictatorships. "I thought the whole idea in Germany was that women didn't count anyway," she said yesterday at her press conference.

The discussion centered around the First Lady's stand on Franco's insistence of complete surrender in Spain. As she sees it, the aftermath of war usually is unsatisfactory because all too often a vindictive attitude dictates the terms of peace.

Negotiations by England and France seem now to be the only hope in the Spanish situation, she believes. Asked if people in the United States are not afraid to trust England and France, she said that if they are, they can "have little knowledge of either history or the present situation."

In this connection, she wondered if people in general ever study their history lessons anymore, and she advised a thorough review of policies followed since the day of Napoleon. "It is better to face facts as they are and to follow a policy that has been aimed, at least, to prevent war before war really begins," she declared.

Mrs. Roosevelt implied that she has several reservations about the proposed plan for reorganizing government of the District of Columbia, "but it might work out," she said.

thought further speeches at this time on this Nation's foreign policy "would only add to the confusion."

At the same time the special House Republican Committee on National Defense adopted a report indorsing in the main the emergency armament program. The group is headed by Representative Wadsworth of New York. It was said the report will be taken up at a House Republican conference tomorrow evening or Friday and is expected to constitute the party's stand on the armament issue.

Support Qualified

The report stipulates that the increase to 5,500 planes provided in the May bill should be spread over three or four years, and questions the advisability of building a strong base on the island of Guam.

These developments followed unanimous approval of the $367,000,000 emergency defense bill by the House Military Affairs Committee. Reducing the number of airplanes to be provided from 6,000 to 5,500—the number proposed in the President's message—the group voted down, 15 to 10, a Republican proposal to spread the procurement of the 3,200 additional craft over three years instead of 18 months.

Bill Delayed to Monday

The committee adopted an amendment to give National Guard and Reserve personnel called into active service for more than one month in either peace or war, the same rights as Regular Army officers as to disability, death, gratuities and pensions. The only other change made was to make the $32,500,000 provided for "educational orders" to manufacturers available over three years and allow $2,000,000 a year for this purpose for the succeeding four years.

Under a change of plan the bill will not be taken up on the floor until Monday. Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, of the committee, declared that the bill will pass by Tuesday night with practically no opposition.

In writing the bill, the committee did not provide for suspension of competitive bidding in purchasing planes as proposed by the War Department to facilitate the program. Chairman May said the committee was afraid a few plants would receive the bulk of the orders if negotiated contracts were permitted.

$300,000,000 Spending Proposed

The committee chairman revealed that the program contemplates spending $300,000,000 for new aircraft as follows: $170,000,000 for new planes; $33,000,000 for aviation personnel; $62,000,000 for construction at air fields; $14,000,000 for equipment for air units; $8,000,000 for bombs; $7,000,000 for instruction equipment and pay of civil flying instructors; $3,000,000 for maintenance, and $3,000,000 for research.

Some members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee predicted the group would vote today to publish the testimony of the French plane deal but would withhold it for a time.

Lewis Considers Plane Workers

Senator Lewis (Democrat), Illinois, said he favored publication of the committee record as soon as it was possible to do so without disturbing the contractural relations between the French government and the plane manufacturers.

"It is not a question of concealing or giving away secrets to the public," he declared, "but deciding when the details of private deals can be revealed without interfering with them."

Senator Logan, of Kentucky, also on the committee, said the record of testimony should be published only after the committee finishes its task and can go over the record and determine what should be made public and what parts should not.

Right to Talk Asked

A Republican on the committee, however, demanded the President give the committee permission to talk about the secret Tuesday conference of the committee at the White House. Senator Gurney, of South Dakota, declared "the President has said what he thinks he said to us, now let us give our side."

President Roosevelt, at his press conference, satirized officials who give reporters news without permitting use of their names.

Asked about the story on the anti-aircraft directors he authorized reporters to state that a president who would not permit use of his name had revealed that when he read the story he had had a fit.

The President declared he had investigated and had found that the only such equipment built in this country which had been exported to Britain had been an old model built by the Sperry Gyroscope Co. under patents held by the Vickers Co., of England.

By making the sales, he continued, the price of directors sold to the United States Army by the Sperry Co. had been cut, with a saving to the Government of $250,000, after the company had been enabled, thanks to foreign sales, to expand its production. Pressing his point as a parallel to the French plane deal, the President said that last September the Sperry Co. had asked permission to sell an improved model of the director to the British and that on January 7 this had been refused.

Meawhile the question of foreign policy was raised before the House Naval Affairs Committee as the group sought to conclude hearings on the $85,000,000 naval air base measure. Representatives of peace societies appeared before the group to urge that the bill be delayed while a special Congressional committee reviews foreign policy. Walter W. Van Kirk told the group that the Navy's plans for improving harbor facilities at Guam would be regarded in Japan as "provocative."

Gunboat Aids 12 Americans In China Siege

Foreigners, Guerrillas Surrounded Together; Japanese May Attack

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Feb. 8.—The United States gunboat Oahu sailed today from Hankow for Kiukiang, 400 miles up the Yangtze River from here, prepared to assist marooned Americans at Kuling, where Japanese are threatening to attack Friday.

Twelve Americans are among 65 foreigners at Kuling, a missionary center and mountain resort 15 miles south of Kiukiang.

The foreigners have been surrounded for several months by Japanese besieging 4,000 Chinese guerrillas entrenched on the mountain. Japanese warned, February 2, that they planned to bomb and assault the stronghold. The British gunboat Ladybird already is at Kiukiang.

It was understood the United States made clear to Japan that she did not admit the Japanese disclaimer of responsibility for any damages or casualties resulting to Americans from the contemplated attack.

Killing yesterday of two officials of the Japanese-sponsored reformed government brought to 47 the number of known political assassinations in this area.

Most of those killed were Chinese who had accepted office in the Japanese-controlled regime, but 12, Chinese said, were anti-Japanese agitators.

Shanghai (Wednesday), Feb. 8 (U.P.).—Three assassins who escaped shot to death Tung Chi-eao, a police official of the Japanese-sponsored Tatao government, today. His father, chief of detectives, was assassinated last week.

Moscow, Feb. 7 (AP).—The Soviet Russian icebreaker Sedoff reported by wireless today she had drifted to a position believed to be the farthest north any ship has reached since 1895—85.42 north, about 300 miles from the Pole. The ship is in its second year of involuntary wandering in Arctic Ice.

Quarrels Mar Arab-Jewish London Talks

Chamberlain Urges Moslems to Adopt Friendlier Tone

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 7.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today recommended his policy of "personal" appeasement to Jews and Arabs as two bitter quarrels complicated the conference called to settle the future of Palestine.

First the Arabs refused to sit in conference with Jewish delegates, forcing Chamberlain to address the delegations separately.

Then the Arabs squabbled among themselves over permitting moderate Palestine Arabs to sit in the conference. The first scheduled business discussion had to be postponed.

Malcolm MacDonald, secretary for colonies, and Richard Austen Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, tried to reconcile the moderate and radical Arabs until 4 o'clock this morning, but when the Arabs arrived at St. James's Palace, the moderate delegates were not present.

Chamberlain immediately showed his dissatisfaction with the Arab attitude toward joint meetings with Jewish delegates by telling them, "The first essential step to understanding is personal contact."

The prime minister congratulated the Jews on their "discipline and restraint" in Palestine and told both delegations:

Britain enters the discussions "bound by obligations under the (League of Nations) mandate . . . and by duty to Parliament . . . the League of Nations and the United States.

"These discussions must be full, frank and free" and their object is "wide settlement of present difficulties which will safeguard the rights and position of Arabs and Jews in Palestine."

(Chamberlain's reference to the United States apparently related to the British-United States treaty of December 3, 1924, in which Britain recognized American rights in Palestine and agreed to consult the United States before any modification of the Palestine mandate.)

Berlin, Feb. 7 (AP).—Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, head of the Nazi Party's foreign political section, told a gathering of diplomats and newspapermen tonight that Europe could never tolerate a Jewish state.

He advocated a "Jewish reservation" somewhere, but not in Palestine.

Rosenberg advanced the most specific plan yet set forth by a high Nazi official for treatment of the Jewish question by proposing that either British Guiana in South America or the French island of Madagascar off East Africa be made into a Jewish "reservation."

"Palestine is too small to take all the Jews," he said. "A Zionist state as contemplated aims not at making a home for the Jews in Palestine, but at creating a Pan-Jewish center of power in the Near East.

"The question remains whether the democracies are willing to set apart a self-contained territory large enough to hold 15,000,000 Jews."

Such a "reservation," he said, "should be financed by Jewish millionaires throughout the world and placed under some form of international control."

Gayda Repudiated By Count Ciano

Rome, Feb. 7 (AP).—Italy's determination to aid insurgent Gen. Franco until he has won a "political" as well as military victory in Spain was reaffirmed today by Virginio Gayda, often considered Premier Mussolini's spokesman.

Foreign Minister Count Ciano at the same time, however, was authoritatively reported to have told British Ambassador Lord Perth that Gayda did not represent the government attitude when he wrote previously that Italian troops would stay in Spain until Franco won a full political victory.

Plane Believed To Have Dived 670 M. P. H.

Wing Buckled by 670 M. P. H. Speed, but Aviator Lands Safely

By the Associated Press.

Shreveport, La., Feb. 7.—Second Lieut. Troy Keith, of the Air Corps Reserve, had no ill effects today after a plane dive of nearly 4 miles during which Barksdale Field officers estimated he may have traveled faster than any human ever has.

Flying yesterday at 25,000 feet above Caddo Lake, Lieut. Keith lost consciousness when his oxygen tank failed to function. Before he recovered, his Army pursuit plane plunged to 9,000 feet where he managed to get control of it and land safely despite a buckled wing.

Army officers said the plunge of the plane to lower altitude and denser atmosphere brought back use of the pilot's faculties.

Lieut. Keith found that his speed indicator had jammed at 500 miles an hour. Although conceding it was a "scientific guess," other officers experienced in aerodynamics figured the plane may have attained a speed of about 670 miles an hour, or more than 11 miles a minute, during the dive.

Lieut. Keith's plane was the same type used recently by Test Pilot H. Lloyd Child, of the Curtiss-Wright Aeroplane Co., who made an experimental power dive at Buffalo, N. Y., an an estimated speed of about 575 miles an hour. Child started from an altitude of 22,000 feet.

De Valera Joins Fight on Terrorists

Dublin, Feb. 7 (AP).—Prime Minister De Valera introduced bills today to maintain "position and authority" of Eire's government against the illegal Irish Republican Army whose campaign of terrorism has caused England to place a special guard over the King and Queen and public buildings.

Joining forces with Britain to suppress the I. R. A., De Valera declared he was against using force to obtain a union of Ireland and the six northern counties.

960 MEN BLAZE TRAIL TO WHISKEY ECONOMY!

In Dramatic "1,000 Men Survey"—960 Find Old Quaker—Now 3 Years Old—Amazingly Smooth, Mild, Rich in Flavor—Supporting Our Belief That Old Quaker Rivals Many Higher-Priced Brands!

● For every man who enjoys fine whiskey—but also has to watch his pocketbook—here's the cheerliest news of 1939. Old Quaker . . . now 3 years old . . . ranks with many more expensive whiskies—in taste, bouquet and smoothness! Read why we make this statement. . .

We actually went to 1,000 men—asked them to try Old Quaker and give us their frank opinion. "Smell it!" we said. "Taste it! Take a drink of it! Then say what you think!"

None of these men knew the name, age or price of the whiskey he was trying. Yet, 960 out of the 1,000 were enthusiastic in their praise—found Old Quaker had just about every fine quality a good whiskey can possess.

If you agree with these 960 out of 1,000 men—Old Quaker can probably cut your whiskey bills a third. There's only one way to find out—try Old Quaker yourself!

"That's wonderful whiskey! Smooth and soft enough to drink straight!" said Edward Nicholson, Brooklyn Automobile Dealer.

into three units for absorption by as many departments. The Revenue Department would take over the license division; the Public Works Department would handle the traffic lights, and the Police Department would enforce traffic regulations.

People's Counsel Abolished

Abolition of the office of People's Counsel, vacant for two years, and discontinuance of the job of Recreational Co-ordinator are recommended.

Officials who might be retained as department heads, the report points out, are: Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, finance; Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal, law; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, education; Dr. George F. Bowerman, library; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police; Charles E. Schrom, fire; J. Balch Moor, insurance; Dr. George C. Ruhland, health, and William J. Thompkins, title records.

The proposal for a department of public utilities provides for a new administrative officer to serve as full-time commissioner, as the office of the Engineer Commissioner, who now serves part time, is abolished.

Absorption of the Alley Dwelling Authority by the District government proper apparently would squeeze out John Ihlder, executive officer, as his duties would be taken over by the District administrator, or city manager, and the governing body would perform the duties of the ADA board.

Control Board Functions Split

Functions of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board are split between two departments. Enforcement duties and the staff go to the police department, while licensing is taken over by the revenue department.

Among other independent boards that would be absorbed and possibly abolished as part of the reorganization are:

The boxing commission, whose duties would be split between the police and the revenue departments.

Parole board, whose functions would be taken over by the Welfare Board.

Minimum Wage Board, absorbed by the department of occupational standards.

Police and fire retiring and relief boards, whose duties would be assumed by the personnel department.

The coroner's duties are split three ways in the proposed administrative set-up. The Health Department would perform the medical functions, the law department hold inquests, and the serving of subpenas would come under the United States marshal.

Professional Boards Scrapped

Many of the boards of professionals, such as the barber's examining board and the cosmetology board, only recently created, are transferred to the Department of Occupational Standards. The report explained they may be retained within the department or scrapped, as Congress sees fit.

Other independent boards, such as the Board of Education and the library trustees, while losing some of their authority, may become advisory committees to the directors of education and libraries, respectively.

Four divisions are proposed for the Police Department, which would absorb the United States Park Police in the District and the National Zoo watchmen. They are (1) crime prevention, (2) crime detection, (3) patrol, and (4) traffic.

The Police and Fire Surgeons Board is absorbed by the Health Department.

3 Hit-Runners Injure 2; Congress Car Hunted

Traffic

Grace Lucas, 49, of 3438 Brown street northwest. She was held by Riley until police arrived—although the cab driver said he was forced to call for help in order to restrain the woman from again driving off.

Young Donch was taken to Emergency Hospital where physicians said they were awaiting the results of X-ray pictures to determine extent of his injuries.

Lewis Orlando, 2421 Eighteenth street northwest, told police an Arkansas car with Congressional plates attempted to pass him at 50 miles an hour, sideswiping his machine. He said the owner refused to give his name when Roland forced him to the side of the street after a brief chase. The accident took place at Connecticut avenue and R street northwest.

Struck by a hit-run motorist in the 2400 block of Lee highway, Al Howard, 2035 North Taylor street, Arlington, was rushed to Georgetown Hospital in serious condition.

Sam F. Richey, of Balls Hill, Fairfax County, Va., told police his car was forced off the road while traveling on Old Dominion highway near McLean, Va. The second auto sped away, he said.

In making his unprecedented appearance at Police Headquarters to appeal for city-wide action against "the most vicious of traffic menaces," Representative Schulte said he was not prompted by the recent hit-run killing of a Congressman's son (the death Friday of Representative Caldwell's son at Connecticut avenue and Woodley place northwest).

"At least," he added, "I was not prompted by that tragedy alone. The hit-run motorist is a degenerate and coward at heart and his type must be wiped from the streets.

"It is up to you men," Schulte told members of the police traffic squad, "to see that these heartless drivers are caught and brought to justice. You will have the support of every member of Congress—we must act and act at once to prevent recurrence of what has happened on Washington streets in the last several days."

"Let's not let them get away with it any more," Schulte declared. "Let's go out and rid the streets of these cowards who leave a trail of dead and injured behind heir speeding autos."

Pedestrians Face Fines

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said a 15-day period of "education" would follow the effective date of the pedestrian control regulation. In that time, he said, pedestrians will be warned of their offenses and no arrests will be made until the new law is understood by everyone.

"But after that," Hazen warned, "police will be instructed to enforce the rules rigidly and pedestrians will be charged and taken into court for violations."

Announcing adoption of pedestrian control laws, the Commissioners called for "100 per cent public cooperation" to make the new rules inforceable. It was pointed out that violators of the pedestrian laws will be treated "the same as motorists, facing fines of from $1 to $300 upon conviction.

The amended traffic regulations include the following provisions for pedestrians:

"No pedestrian, equestrian or driver of any vehicle shall disobey the instructions of any applicable official traffic sign unless directed to do so by a police officer. Police officers shall have full power to regulate pedestrian, equestrian and vehicular traffic.

"At intersections where traffic is controlled by traffic-control signals or by police officers, drivers of vehicles shall yield the right of way to pedestrians crossing or those who have started to cross the roadway on a green or "go" signal.

"No pedestrian shall use any roadway between intersections when a vehicle is approaching from either direction so as to constitute a hazard for his own safety or use such roadway at any time in a negligent or reckless manner."

An 8-year-old boy was reported near death at Gallinger Hospital last night following an accident on the Colesville pike in Montgomery County. Richard Whisman, a ward of the Board of Public Welfare, was waiting for a school bus when he was struck by a passing car near his home at White Oaks, Md.

The youngster, according to schoolmates, was tussling with a friend when he darted into the path of a car driven by August J. Walker, Riverdale, Md. Walker took the child to the office of Dr. William Aud, Silver Spring, where it was found he received internal injuries, a possible fractured skull, a fractured left leg and multiple lacerations. Hospital attendants said last night his condition was critical.

Mary Frankenfield, school teacher, 2213 Franklin street northeast, struck by a motorcycle near Twenty-second street and Bladensburg road northeast, was taken to Casualty Hospital yesterday in an undetermined condition with face and body injuries. Joseph M. King, 30, of 905 East Capitol street northwest, driver of the motorcycle, was charged with reckless driving.

In another accident, near First and Madison streets northwest, John Reed, 35, of the Midcity Hotel, received a fractured hip. He was treated at Freedman's Hospital.

William Palmer, colored, 43, of 2400 Sixteenth street northwest, was taken to Freedman's Hospital following an accident at Georgia avenue and Euclid street northwest. He was treated for injuries of hips and legs.

Traffic Victims and Alert Citizen

Would Use Firemen

Employment of District firemen as part-time traffic policemen was proposed in a resolution adopted last night by the Randle Highlands Citizens Association.

Several Southern cities, it was argued, have cut the traffic toll among school children by detailing firemen at street intersections near their fire stations in the hours when most youngsters are on the streets.

The association also recommended an increase in the number of fireboxes in Randle Highlands from 7 to 14. Another resolution called for more rigorous enforcement of elevator-inspection regulations in the District.

2 Forging Suspects Are Arrested Here

Spurgeon L. Beaver, 39, of 509 East Capitol street, former employe of the Lorton Rehabilitation Bureau, was arrested yesterday on charges of check forgeries involving more than $500.

Carlton Sard, 33, who told police he is a lawyer, was picked up at a downtown hotel and charged with passing four bad checks. He is on probation from a former bad check charge, police said.

Prime Minister Squelches Plan That He Visit U. S.

London, Feb. 7 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain turned down a suggestion in Commons today that he visit President Roosevelt. Geoffrey Mander, opposition Liberal, had called President Roosevelt "the greatest man in the world at the present time" when he questioned Chamberlain.

Meanwhile, King George and Queen Elizabeth discussed their forthcoming visit to the United States and Canada with Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington.

D. C. 'Rose Bandit' Gets Atlanta Term In Escape Attempt

New Orleans, Feb. 7 (AP).—Richard Heck, accused in the "rose bandit" robberies in Washington, D. C., was sentenced here today by Federal Judge Borah to a year and a day in Atlanta Penitentiary on charges of destroying Federal property and attempting to escape.

Heck, arrested in New Orleans, was indicted for an attempted escape while awaiting removal to the District of Columbia.

The man who perpetrated the series of robberies in Washington left a rose at each place robbed.

Nazi Cliques Row Over Robes Worn At Civil Weddings

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Feb. 7.—A tempest has arisen in Nazi quarters over the brown robe with flowing sleeves adopted as the costume of mayors and clerks while officiating at civil marriages.

Apparently Viktor Lutze's "Brown Army," recently restored by Reichsfuehrer Hitler to its erstwhile prestige, favors the robe, supporting Wilhelm Frick's ministry of the interior.

On the other hand, in a sharply worded editorial, the Schwarz Korps, organ of Henrich Himmler's black-uniformed S. S. guardsmen, condemns the costume as simply a modification of all religious robes, including those of Jews.

Cayton Quits Howard Over Boyd Ouster

Protest Staff Strife And School's 'Disdain' For Public Goodwill

Protesting the "indecent" ouster of a fellow faculty member and bitter strife in the administration of Howard University affairs, Municipal Court Judge Nathan Cayton yesterday resigned from the staff of the law school.

Judge Cayton, who has served on the faculty for a decade, said he had no personal grievances but hoped his resignation would focus attention on "conditions which need correction so badly."

"I protest," the jurist said in his resignation, "against the indecent manner in which Judge James A. Cobb, a distinguished alumnus and senior member of the law faculty, was unceremoniously 'booted' out of his position, in a star chamber ex-parte meeting, without notice and without hearing."

Johnson Not Told

Judge Cobb lost a court battle to force his reappointment to the staff when he failed to be renamed to the faculty for the current academic year.

A committee of the Howard University Union, an A. F. L. unit, has been seeking to obtain permanent tenure for faculty members. Judge Cayton's protest may bring about such a reform, several professors pointed out yesterday.

Dean William E. Taylor of the law school expressed surprise and regret over the action taken by Judge Cayton. Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, university president, who is ill, was not told of the resignation but his executive assistant, Dr. James M. Nabritt, said it had been received.

'Disdainful of Goodwill'

In his statement Judge Cayton said:

"I deem it my duty . . . to give voice to the inescapable and continuing protest I feel against the manner in which the affairs of the university are being conducted.

"I protest against the temperamental manner in which appointments to and dismissals from the faculties have been made, and against the constant turmoil and uncertainty within the faculties, evidenced by the numerous complaints against the leadership of the university, and evidenced further by the repeated litigation in which the university has become involved.

"I protest against an attitude which is seemingly forgetful of public opinion, and disdainful of public goodwill, which the university so sorely needs, particularly since it is through public money appropriated to the use of Howard University that its continuance is made possible. I protest against the situation which finds the management of the university and the alumni constantly and often bitterly at odds and gives no promise of satisfactory solution."

AFL May Revive Pan-American Labor Federation

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor considered today revival of the dormant Pan-American Federation of Labor to counteract Nazi-Fascist doctrines in South America—a step which might add international flavor to the C. I. O.-A. F. L. feud.

Federation President Green said the A. F. L. executive council today considered sending a commission to confer with South America labor groups.

C. I. O. Chieftain Lewis attended the organization of a new Latin-American Federation of Labor Unions in Mexico City last September after the A. F. L. had rejected an invitation and criticized the meeting as "extreme leftist."

Thief Foiled Once Robs Second Bank

Los Angeles, Feb. 7 (AP).—A man in a gray hat, dark glasses and green suit entered a Bank of America branch at Hollywood today and poked a pistol at Teller Ralph Horning. Another employe touched off an alarm and the robber escaped.

Ten minutes later the same man, without glasses and with a brown hat, appeared in another branch a mile away, shoved a customer aside and snatched $300.

that their names not be printed. The comments:

"This jury-fixing is all news to me."

"I can't believe that anybody got to one of the jury."

The informations to be handed up in court today will ask that orders be issued requiring the alleged jury fixers to show cause why they should not be held in contempt. If found guilty they would be liable to whatever imprisonment Justice Laws might set. The case was declared outside the class of cases in which his power to imprison is limited.

The way was smoothed yesterday for trial of another conspiracy case, involving five colored men in the numbers racket, by Justice Adkins' refusal to outlaw the Government's evidence.

Accused are Ollie Timberlake, Ray Brent, Leonard E. Richardson, Joseph E. Jaynes and Herbert L. Pridgen. Besides the conspiracy involving all of them, each is charged with a numbers-law violation. All will be tried at once.

The numbers slips seized in an automobile were understood to have been identified as belonging to one of the city's largest numbers gangs, which caters to an extensive colored patronage and books several thousand dollars in bets every day.

Assistant District Attorney Tarver will handle the prosecution of Quijano in District Court today. Extensive preparations for the trial were under way yesterday, with scores of jurors being closely questioned.

Quijano, native of the Philippines, was arrested January 10 following investigation of a numbers enterprise reputed to handle $600 or $700 a day.

Two days later he was accused in the same indictment as Alice N. Haight, Barkley Hawkins, William Wooten, Venancio Q. Liberato and Numeriano M. Del Rosario.

Sideny R. Harris, 27, of 2500 K street northwest, a musician, was among those summoned as witnesses in the Quijano case. Detective Lieut. Joseph Shimon, chief of the police pickup squad, arrested Harris early yesterday

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Innocent pleas were entered today by Johnny Torrio, one-time Chicago gangster, and three others indicted with him on charges of income tax law violation and conspiracy. The trial was tentatively set for March 7.

Bail for Torrio was continued at $50,000. Bail for each of the other defendants was fixed at $5,000.

able husband-and-wife combination playing tournament bridge today. This, of course, is the exception to the general rule in this connection.

Ranking National Player

"Congressman Kunckle is a ranking national player and Mrs. Van Devanter, although not a nationally prominent tournament player, will hold her own, I am certain, even in this fast company."

Capt. Guenther explained that the hand he and Lieut. Comdr. Corley have selected for the play is not, in any sense, a "trick" hand.

"It is," he said, "a hand that tripped several players in the Maryland State tournament last week—but one that every good bridge player should be able to competently bid and play, if his or her game is solid. It very aptly illustrates many important bridge principles that come up in everyday play. That is why it was chosen for this particular purpose."

Refereed "Battle of Century"

Capt. Guenther, in describing the play, will not be acting a role new to him. It was he who refereed the the famous "Bridge Battle of the Century"—the 20-day match in which Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson defeated the Sidney Lenz-Oswald Jacoby combination in 150 hotly contested rubbers.

For the convenience of listeners who wish to lay out the actual cards before them, in advance of the broadcast, the hand to be played will be published in tomorrow morning's Post, making it possible to follow every bid and play from the viewpoint of each of the four individual players.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

CLOUD CLUB: Shar-Zad is nurturing a new Georgetown University fraternity. It's the "Cloud Club" and the chief entrance qualification is that you guess which one of those clouds drifting over Shar-Zad travels the fastest. This requires both acute and consistent observation. For would-be Cloud Clubbers we can only say that the speed cloud is named "Elmer" and he's not so far from the Orchestra stand. P. S. Don't depend on this. That Shar-Zad cloud engineer is temperamental.

SPRING IS HERE: Erwin Devron, pianist of Paul Kain's Metronome Room orchestra (that nice lad who always plays the customers' favorite tunes before they even request them), has been going places with Miss Dorothy Warrington, of the Chet H. Warringtons, of Chevy Chase.

Singer Lou Martel (Carlton's Biltmore Boys) and pianist (what is there about these piano players?) Frank Schubert, also of the B. Boys, are always dining duo these evenings. Lou is 19 and Frank's just turned 21.

"MY-A GOODNESS! Can't I go to the movies with someone without getting engaged?" said Hi Hat's singer, Angie Rodante, apropos of a certain news item (not printed in this column) about her being seen around with bass player Ken Fisher of the Red Jackets. Then we asked Angie about that Tampa boy she was remembering so truly last summer. "Six months is a long time," said Angie cryptically. Write your own answer.

Exciting, too, is that nonmuted whisper going around about the Washington society lass (also gifted as a singer) who's said to be so interested, not in one of her social register pals, but in a professional musician.

PIRATE PROSPECTS: Just before the Pirates' Den opened last evening (when this was written) the place was a-buzz with preparations for receiving Rudy Vallee, Errol Flynn, Lily Damita, Mrs. Jock Whitney and other celebrities, including many Congressional and society groups. The pirates were plumb worn down from writing reservations in the log. It looked like a fair sail and a flowing gale for the Don Dickerman buccaneers and their willing captives. Ahoy!

MIRTH PLUS MACK spells mirth-plus in the Shoreham Blue Room. Besides tap-stepping in the St. Vitus spirit, Mirth and Mack impersonate a roster of Hollywood celebrities ranging from George Arliss to the Marx Brothers. Radio Barytone Gener Archer sings mellowly, is at his best in "Rose Marie" numbers.

LONDON CALLS: Jack Kerr, who sings in the impertinent but polished manner at Cafe Caprice, has just turned down a bid to appear in a Firth Shepherd (English Ziegfeld) revue to be produced in London. But though Jack has turned a deaf ear to London's first call, we hear he'll embark on the S. S. Queen Mary in May to begin an engagement at Ciro's in London where he played for a full year in 1937-38.

WALTZ CLOWNING: When Yorke and Lewis waltz dreamly out at Lotus, you think, "how beautiful!" Then they start tripping over each other's feet, getting tangled up in whirls and you realize that you're seeing a practically classic ribbing of the classic waltz. Comic, too, is Peter Chan, a Chinese singer partial to Irish songs. Adagio-acrobatics requiring rubber anatomies are done by St. Clair and Durand. Red-headed Danny Dennis rides a three-story unicycle. The Haynes Brothers do "Russian knee drops" which are going to leave them without knees one of these days. Washington's prize tap stepper, Johnny Barnes, is held over. He would be. It's a double-value show, both in size and diversion quality.

UPPITY UPTOWN: If you like those "sweetheart songs" done with a lift that swings the melody right up to the roof, be sure to park in the Uptown cocktail lounge. When Ray Beck and Libby Frazier take off in such numbers as "Deep in a Dream," all of the Uptown-ers sit bewitched, even forgetting to sip their double cocktails.

BECK

CUTEST LI'L LADY that's ever come to town is Betty Tanner (just 3 feet tall) who's dancing with 6-footer Buddy Thomas at Bamboo Gardens. Betty's full-grown, though she's so tiny, is a miniature Earl Carroll girl. We're told that it's much more difficult for Buddy to do that whirlwind waltz with Betty than with a standard size girl. It's like dancing with a baby, requiring a special finesse and care. Karyl Norman, Al Norton and the High Hatters are doing "Edie was a Lady," with a great flourish.

Caperton and Columbus, appearing at the Shoreham, are shown in a "Gay Nineties Mood." Inset is Karyl Norman, singing star at the Bamboo Gardens

WHY COLUMNISTS GO NUTTY: That accomplished musician, Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, tells us that "Umber-ella Man" is a straight steal from Chopin's "Minute Waltz." Equally accomplished Milton Davis, director of the Rainbow Room Orchestra, says that "Umber-ella" was swiped from Durand's Valse in E Flat. Oh-h-h! Maybe they're both right.

CUCKOO! CUCKOO! Mayfair's big drawing cards, Leo and Louanna, have been rehearsing one of the trickiest comedy numbers of the season, "The Cuckoo and the Clock." They'll probably be singing it this afternoon for the first time.

VALENTINE: "Bootsie" McDonnell and Larry Baker have postponed their Pall Mall Room appearance until next Tuesday, St. Valentine's Day. Reason, they want to rehearse until they're sure their numbers have the final touch of professional polish.

VERSATILITY CHAMPIONS: The new Dick Koons directed orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge does more "doubling" than can be listed here. Each of the lads can and does play several instruments. Thus, there are four top-flight pianists in the unit. The natural result is a tremendous flexibility in orchestration—meaning that the Koons music is something swell!

HERE AND COMING: The "Chestnut Tree," newest London dance, has taken root in the Lounge Riviera, with the Swing Sophisticates adding a few American twists in rhythm.

Al Simmonds (Brown Derby) is planning to put on a new one-man melodrama every week.

Muralist Barry Barreto is adding the fine last ttouches to Hour Glass' new "Monkey Bar." Thinks he'll have it finished by the week-end. Do set Saturday aside to view M. Barreto's excursion into anthropoid art.

Group to Discuss Raising of $75,000 For Police Boys

Plans to raise $75,000 during the week of February 18 to 27, for the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, will be discussed at the first membership committee meeting to be presided over this afternoon by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox at club headquarters, 1422 H street northwest.

A taxi tour of three of the Boys' Clubs will be held Monday evening when Gen. Cox and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, head of the police force, lead a parade of cabs with motorcycle escort. The cavalcade is scheduled to start from campaign headquarters and visit clubs No. 2, No. 4 and No. 10.

Other members of the committee meeting this afternoon are Morris Cafritz, James A. Councilor, E. S. Pardoe, C. B. Dulcan, sr., H. Clifford Bangs, Maj. Robert A. McClure, Inspector Edward J. Kelly, J. H. Ferry and L. Gordon Leach.

Columbia Gas Files Plan for Simplification

Holding Companies Eliminated Under Proporal to SEC

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission announced yesterday that the $725,000,000 Columbia Gas & Electric Corporation had filed a plan for simplifying its structure under the holding company act.

The law requires holding companies to simplify themselves financially and geographically.

The company's subsidiaries operate in Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New York, Kentucky and the District.

The plan filed with the commission proposes the following changes:

Atlantic Seaboard Corporation, the only subsidiary of Columbia which is a holding company, will sell the stocks and bonds which it owns of Amere Gas Utilities Co., Virginia Gas Distribution Corporation, and Virginia Gas Transmission Corporation, to Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation.

To End Holding Company

These three companies will thus become 100 per cent-owned, direct subsidiaries of Columbia Gas & Electric and Atlantic Seaboard Corporation will cease to be a holding company.

The following subsidiary companies of Columbia Gas & Electric will cease to control any other companies:

United Fuel Gas Co., the Manufacturers Light & Heat Co., Fayette County Gas Co. and the Cincinnati, Newport & Covington Railway Co.

Eastern Pipe Line Co. will sell its physical assets to Home Gas Co., and Eastern Pipe Line Co. will be dissolved. Three inactive subsidiary companies of Columbia Gas which are not public utility companies will be dissolved.

Atlas Files New Plan

Atlantic Seaboard Corporation, Delaware; Amere Gas Utilities, West Virginia; Fayette County Gas Co., West Virginia; Manufacturers Light & Heat Co., Pennsylvania; United Fuel Gas Co., West Virginia.

The commission also announced that Atlas Corporation had filed a new plan of reorganization of Utilities Power & Light Corporation.

Atlas Corporation, an investment company, owns securities in Utilities Power & Light, which is in reorganization under section 77B of the bankruptcy act.

The new plan, the commission said, contemplates that assets of Utilities Power & Light will be vested in a new company. It was explained a new corporation may be formed or the existing corporate structure utilized.

Shameless Sentimentalism Marks This Year's Valentines

Gushy 'Poems,' Not Enough, Backed By Pictured Swains and Girls in Bowers Exchanging Melting Glances

There's no beating around the bush in the 1939 crop of valentines. The theme is "I Love You," and mere words to that effect won't do the job.

Scouts for the card and stationery people apparently detected a trend of one sort or another, because the current batch of greetings for February 14 is the most shamelessly sentimental since the Victorian era.

Five dollars will buy a garden bower scene framed in real lace. The two-for-a-nickle valentines put across the same idea in four colors.

A $2 one on sale in a local department store is an imitation photograph album of the gay '90s, depicting on the cover a mustachioed gallant holding a girl's hand. Inside, on a heavy gold-edged leaf, was, as the salesgirls asserted, "a really lovely verse:"

"Other folks can't come between us,
In my thoughts I keep you near,
While I wish you joy and whisper
Tenderly, 'I love you, dear.'"

With the seasonal swing toward good will between the sexes, several shops report unusually brisk demand for valentines specially addressed to husbands or wives.

The comic valentine, it appears, almost has disappeared from circulation. The once honored custom of dispatching caricature and biting verse to creditors, debtors, bosses and the man upstairs who practices the clarinet, was recalled only in one five-and-ten store, where, on demand, a girl finally produced from an out-of-the-way drawer half a dozen tattered "comics" of the old school.

ICC Bill to Bar Control of Rails By Other Roads

Legislation Discussed In Conference At White House

The Interstate Commerce Commission has drafted, for introduction in Congress, legislation designed to prevent the use of funds of a railroad to acquire control of other roads, it was learned yesterday.

The legislation, which follows a recommendation made by the commission in its recent annual report to Congress, was discussed yesterday at a White House conference on measures to aid railroads.

Wheeler and Lea Present

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, revealed, following the conference, the commission had drafted several bills, some of which he would sponsor.

Those conferring with President Roosevelt, besides Wheeler, were Representative Lea (Democrat), of California, chairman of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, and Joseph B. Eastman, Charles D. Mahaffie and Walter M. W. Splawn, members of the I. C. C.

The President explained at his press conference that the purpose in calling the Congressional and I. C. C. leaders was to try to bring about a meeting of minds on various rail aid proposals.

One of the bills which the commission has drafted, it was learned, would impose restrictions on the expenditure by railroads of their funds except for the operation, legitimate improvement or development of their property. Restrictions also would be imposed on railroads incurring obligations or acquiring property.

Outgrowth of Investigation

In addition, the jurisdiction of the I. C. C. would be extended to include noncarrier subsidiaries of railroads, particularly so far as their accounting practices and issuance of securities is concerned.

The commission, it was learned, also has prepared bills to carry out other recommendations for legislation in its annual report.

R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee at hearings on the Lea omnibus rail aid bill that subsidies accorded water and motor carriers, competitors of railroads, should be removed. The roads, he said, should receive the same treatment on taxes as competitors.

Convention Dates Set

The National Association of Supervisors of State Banks will hold its annual meeting at Salt Lake City, Utah, September 20 to 22, it was announced here yesterday after a meeting of the executive committee.

The WPA Message

Three days after approving the legislation which cuts the current supplementary appropriation for WPA by $150,000,000 the President sends to Congress a special messeage requesting an additional appropriation of $150,000,000. The only possible inference to be drawn is that Mr. Roosevelt refuses to take this legislative action seriously.

In yesterday's message to Congress the President argues speciously that the cut which has been ordered leaves WPA with only two alternatives. One is to strike a million persons from the relief rolls on April 1, maintaining two million unemployed on work projects for the remainder of the fiscal year. The other is to "commence a week-by-week reduction on April 1 and to carry this reduction through to June 30."

To assert that such a situation has been created by the legislation which the President has now approved is simply not the case. It is not the case even if it is assumed that the current $725,000,000 appropriation envisaged no reduction of the number on relief prior to April 1. The joint resolution did specify that the reduction during these months should not be more than 5 per cent. The President now says that there will be no curtailment in the numbers on WPA prior to April 1.

But the most obvious alternative, which is the introduction of economy and efficiency into WPA practice, is not even mentioned by Mr. Roosevelt. He assumes that the present extravagant and arbitrary outlay of $61 per month for each relief worker is to be maintained. He never mentions the obvious possibility of taking up slack here. He never mentions the equally obvious possibility of dropping types of projects where a large part of the outlay goes for purposes other than providing employment. He never mentions the possibility of temporarily discontinuing WPA in districts where it has been made a tool of politics.

Congress has not yet said that WPA must be abolished and a more rational relief system created in its place. Congress has said that WPA must be more economically and efficiently administered, and has trimmed its deficiency appropriation to give point to that mandate. This does not mean that men must be dropped from WPA. Indeed, there can be additions to the rolls if the huge sum still available is spread less lavishly, more in accord with fiscal realities.

The President, however, refuses to accept this legislative action. He asks, in effect, that the Congress promptly repeal the law it has just passed, after long and careful consideration. And he advances no new or convincing argument for this strange request.

The only possible course for Congress is to refuse to appropriate the sum now asked. It has told the Administration to run relief on a slightly less extravagant scale. If the WPA refuses to do so it will not be difficult to locate the blame for any suffering which may result.

Batista Steps Out

Until his recent visit to the United States, Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's "strong man," had never left the island republic. But as with lesser men his taste for travel seems to grow with indulgence. The trip to Washington has now been followed by a visit to Mexico City, where he is being feted by President Lazaro Cardenas.

The meeting of the Mexican and Cuban leaders undoubtedly involves more than an exchange of courtesies. It may be assumed that, having firmly established a dominant position at home, the head of the Cuban army is anxious to widen the sphere of his activity. And Mexico is clearly not averse, at the moment, to making friends and influencing people. Indeed Mexico has for some time sought with might and main, and not without some success, to become the leader of a Latin-American bloc of states adhering to advanced social and economic views.

Economic difficulties, which the Cuban-American trade agreement has only partially and temporarily eased, have pushed Batista somewhat to the left in his political orientation. He has not yet sought escape from these difficulties by the road of expropriation. For a number of rather obvious reasons he will probably refrain from following the Mexican example here. There are, however, other pages of Cardenas' book which Batista might make his own. At any rate, there is no reason why he should not at least inform himself of what has been done in Mexico in the effort, by no means wholly unsuccessful, to improve the lot of the peasants.

The parade of workers in Mexico City, which marched past the visitor from Cuba last Sunday, bore banners saluting Batista and Cardenas as "symbols of the economic liberation of the people of Cuba and Mexico." In the case of Mexico this "liberation" is intimately connected with something closely resembling confiscation of American property. But for this very reason, the outcome of Batista's visit to Mexico City will be watched in this country with unfeigned interest.

The Insurance Inquiry

One of the most important of the special inquiries being conducted for the Temporary National Economic Committee is the SEC's investigation of the insurance companies.

It is now more than 30 years since the Armstrong committee made that comprehensive study of life insurance business which brought the name of Charles Evans Hughes to the notice of the entire country. In the intervening period the growth of our insurance companies has been phenomenal. But there has been no corresponding quickening of public interest in the operations of the companies, largely, no doubt, because the Armstrong committee functioned so well and did so much to insure safety of policyholders' funds.

It is time, however, for another searching probe of the insurance business to determine how the companies utilize their great investment powers and how their policies affect the course of the Nation's economic development. In opening hearings before the monopoly committee, Chairman Douglas of the SEC made it plain that no information brought out would jeopardize the protection accorded under insurance policies. Indeed, the factual material presented on the first day of the hearings was most striking in its impressive evidence of the great financial strength of the leading companies.

The huge volume of assets belonging to insurance companies gives them a dominant position in our capital markets, and compels them to influence the economic life of the country to a very large extent. Since 1906, when the Armstrong committee was functioning, the assets of legal reserve companies have risen from less than $3,000,000,000 to over $27,000,000,000. And half of that stupendous total represents the holdings of the five major companies. Here is evidence of concentrated financial power and managerial power divorced from ownership—for many of the big companies are mutual companies owned by the policyholders.

No matter how efficient insurance company management may be, the question inevitably arises as to whether the public interest may not require limits upon the size of companies. If that question could be raised seriously over three decades ago by the Armstrong committee it is certainly pertinent today when one great company controls nearly $5,000,000,000 of assests, or more than one and one-half times the total value of all assets held by the legal reserve companies in 1906.

Because considerations of safety necessitate restricting investments to a relatively few fields, the power exercised by insurance company managements is not only absolutely great but exceptionally potent. Thus we find that during the depression and postdepression years the companies have acquired enormous amounts of Government securities. Railroad bond holdings, although still absolutely large, have declined sharply in relative importance in the investment portfolios of the companies in recent years, while farm mortgage holdings have shrunk both absolutely and percentually.

The insurance companies have aided the Government's deficit financing largely as a matter of necessity. The collapse of farm values has forced withdrawal from the farm mortgage field, while the hard pressed condition of the railroads has discouraged allocation of funds to that once preferred investment outlet. All these shifts create difficult problems for insurance company managements, of course, as well as for those groups deprived of insurance funds.

The SEC is, therefore, in a position to make a very valuable contribution to the work undertaken by the Temporary National Economic Committee as it proceeds from fact finding to intensive study of the investment policies of insurance companies with a view to appraising their effect upon the national welfare. The fact-finding preliminaries merely indicate the nature and the scope of the problems presented by the concentration of power. What to do about it—if any action is needed—is the problem which will test the mettle of the SEC.

Sensible Traffic Rules

The fairly widespread demand voiced in Washington over a period of many months for increased protection for pedestrians has resulted in the issuance by the District Commissioners of a set of pedestrian-control regulations.

Experience alone can tell whether the new regulations will work out as intended. They seem moderate enough. While prohibiting pedestrians from using any roadway between intersections when a vehicle is approaching from either direction, they also provide that motorists should yield the right-of-way to pedestrians crossing streets on "go" signals. The Commissioners have wisely refrained from adopting the provision proposed by some prohibiting pedestrians from crossing any street in the city other than at crosswalks. Such a rule would doubtless have proved self-defeating.

But no law, however wise, is worth much unless it has the understanding and the support of the public behind it. For this reason, the Commissioners are to be commended for allowing a 25-day period in which the public will have time to become familiar with the changes in traffic regulation. Given public support, the new rules should lead to a reduction in the traffic accident rate, now far too high.

A Challenge To D. C.

Reactions to the Griffenhagen report have been overwhelmingly favorable. For the most part Washington citizens as well as Congressional leaders in District affairs see in the report the framework of a modern city government which could readily be adapted to an elective system or one in which, as at the present time, the top officials would continue to be appointed. So it is reasonable to assume that this reorganization plan will attain greater popularity than any of its predecessors.

With hearings on the report being arranged by Representative Kennedy, the movement to overhaul our obsolete machinery of local government seems to be off to an excellent start. It is well to realize, however, that the hardest tasks remain to be performed. A satisfactory bill must be drafted. In some respects the report is only a general outline of the proposed new set-up, although many details have been filled in by the second installment. And, finally, Congress as a whole must be induced to give the measure a sympathetic hearing.

The situation obviously calls for leadership of a high caliber. It is particularly disappointing that no such leadership is forthcoming from the District Building. Local officials are fully aware of the shortcomings of the present antiquated system. It is reasonable to expect them to become the spearhead of a movement for reforms that would permit them to serve the community more effectively. Moreover, their experience qualifies them to speak with a good deal of authority as to the desirability of the proposed changes.

Fortunately, there seems to be considerable enthusiasm over the report on Capitol Hill. Representative Kennedy, who was largely responsible for authorization of the Griffenhagen study, is preparing to direct the reorganization movement in the House. His deep interest in the problem has long been manifested. The District has reason to be gratified over his assignment to the delicate task of shaping legislation on the subject.

The offer of Chairman King of the Senate District Committee to name a subcommittee to participate in the hearings indicates a similar co-operative attitude.

Citizens ought to take full advantage of this favorable opportunity. There may be opposition to some proposals in the report. Since its general aim is entirely constructive, however, it would be surprising if any outright fight against it should develop. In any event, citizens who have protests to make should carefully examine the report to make certain that their criticism is justified before unloosing a blast that might prejudice the uninformed.

It is being said, for example, that the general effect of the proposed overhauling might be to weaken the influence of the local community in its own government. But the report calls for a large number of advisory boards which would serve much the same function as do the boards of public welfare and education at present. Only administrative functions would be centralized. It cannot reasonably be argued that such responsibility should be distributed on a representative basis.

As for the proposed council, it is captious to assume that it might be less representative of District residents than is the present Board of Commissioners. The report recommends that the policy-making body be enlarged for the specific reason that "it would be difficult in a commission of only three to give adequate recognition to the various points of view in the community." That wording leaves no doubt that the investigators intended the new council or commission to be selected from within the District.

In any event, safeguards of this sort can be written into the proposed bill. The immediate task is not to raise bogeys but to give every helpful aid to the long delayed creation of a genuine municipal government for the District.

"A new broadcasting method and type of radio receiver will even strain the static out of swing music," according to a trade magazine. That would be as neat a trick as straining the wetness out of water.

A 90-year-old Oregonian says he doesn't think he could run a hotel, newspaper, railroad or government better than the management. It takes a lot of years to bring wisdom.

We hadn't realized how much we had aged under the Roosevelt regime until we ran across a reference to the late Secretary Woodin a moment ago. Remember him?

The Belled Buzzard

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Reading your clipping in The Post of February 6 from the Greensboro Daily News concerning buzzards revived old memories and caused my mind to revert back to my adolescent period 50 years ago.

I remember the belled buzzard and he was not a specific breed, as the article would imply, but had a real tinkling bell somewhere that could be heard for quite a distance. The bird's habitat was in and around the swamps of Missouri and Arkansas, but it had been seen and heard as far away as Tennessee and Alabama.

In those days the buzzard took an active part in our economic set-up. He was a carnivorous bird and therefore a scavenger. It was the wont of the people in that day that when any animal—a horse or cow or hog—had died on the place to drag the carcass down to the creek at the lower end of the field and there to provide a banquet for all things that desired to partake. As the buzzard was generally the toastmaster at these feasts he became a valuable asset to the community.

Whether statutory or chimney corner, it was "agin the lawr" and woe betide the luckless hunter who killed a buzzard either in Arkansas or Missouri. Later on it became the law that all dead animals must be buried and not permitted to pollute the streams.

The buzzard is not obscene according to the general conception of the word, but does his part in sanitation and should have paeans of praise written of him instead of words of disapprobation. When society demands it we must have scavengers in one form or another, all of which reminds me of an occurrence in the early nineties.

My father was one of four aldermen who guided the destinies of the little town of Thayer, Mo. They attempted to enact an ordinance preventing hogs from wandering at random through the village streets. Pa was "agin it" because, he argued, that in the absence of a regular scavenger the hogs did the required work quickly and efficiently. As a regular scavenger would cost the taxpayers $40 a month my dad won his point.

I was back in the home town a year ago and these same taxpayers had put in a fine waterworks plant and had installed a complete sewerage system, and during that whole trip I didn't see a single dang buzzard.

Road to Bankruptcy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How long can an individual business man spend more than his income without having to declare bankruptcy? The answer is, as long as he can borrow on his credit. When his credit fails, bankruptcy is inevitable if his liabilities exceed his assets, and there is no possibility of liquidation.

How long can a government keep on spending billions of dollars annually in excess of its income without having to declare itself bankrupt? The answer is, as long as it can borrow on credit. The government's credit is its only capital, or asset. When its credit is gone, it will have no more to spend and nothing with which to pay its debt, and national bankruptcy is inevitable.

How long will American citizens permit public officials to run their Government on a reckless spending scheme which is destined to bring financial ruin to their Government and lead to the appointment of a receivership?

A government has to conduct its business on the same economic plan as does a business man, if it is going to forestall financial bankruptcy. It is time that the taxpayers of the United States give serious thought to the mounting debt of the Government. They are the ones who will have to shoulder the responsibility finally of paying this enormous debt that the Government is now creating.

After five years of prolific spending to give work to the unemployed, we still have 12,000,000 out of employment, 1,000,000 more than five years ago when we started our spending orgy. We still have the same unemployment problem we faced five years ago, with an additional indebtedness of $20,000,000,000 resting on the taxpayer's back. It is high time for the mariners of the Ship of State to cast anchor, take their sounding, and ascertain how much farther they can drift before striking dangerous rocks or shoals which might wreck the Ship of State.

Fears Flood in D. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your news note "Potomac Covers Hains Point" is suggestive. When Gravelly Point is raised above all high water you will see something happen to Hains Point. It will be torn all to pieces and the trees uprooted in very high waters.

This will necessitate the leveeing of Potomac Park, which will in turn require the leveeing of Gravelly Point. The Anacostia levee will have to be raised to meet the other leveeing. All the water front of Washington will have to go up. High waters will go out up Rock Creek and Anacostia River, probably to Bladensburg. Probably all of Anacostia River, both sides, will have to be leveed.

When you try to shackle Old Man River you have started something. Across the Potomac at Gravelly Point used to be about 5,000 feet; that point is to be extended out for about 2,000 feet, which with the new levee protecting the Hoover Airport will simply not leave enough channel for the real high waters to pass through.

Speed and Accidents

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of February 2 quotes Police Judge Curran as saying "I am convinced that speed alone, in and of itself, has never caused an accident," and as advocating an increase in the speed limit because "it is better to have a 30-mile limit with rigid enforcement than to have a 22-mile limit, as at present, with no enforcement at all."

In regard to the latter quotation it might well be asked why there is no enforcement of the 22-mile limit, and what differing conditions would insure a rigid enforcement of a 30-mile limit.

The first statement given above apparently means that speed will not cause an accident so long as there is no blowout or other serious defect, no pedestrian or other traffic is unfortunate enough to get in the way, and the car stays upright and on the road. But these favorable conditions do not always occur. Speed alone may not cause many accidents but it is a contributing factor in most cases and the principal one in many.

A paper entitled "Some Practical Observations on City Traffic," by Elwin G. Speyer, of the American Society of Civil Engineers and adviser to the police department of Buffalo, N. Y., in matters relating to traffic control, concludes:

"Over 90 per cent of the fatal accidents today are chargeable to too much speed, and not to a lack of safety devices on vehicles."

Who Is A Democrat?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When members of that little group of reactionaries representing a few Southern States and districts in Congress were running for their jobs, they were all decked out in lily white Democratic Party clothing, liberal shoes and spoke the Democratic tongue. It was extremely difficult for the unobserving to distinguish them from real, honest-to-God Democrats.

Ah, you should have heard one of them asking the voters of his State to re-elect him, as I did. He excoriated Republicanism and glorified the Democratic Party as "the white man's party," praised President Roosevelt, the New Deal and all, only to be sent back to Washington to out-Republican the Old Guard Republicans, as he had done during his first term.

Intelligent voters in the South have known all along that these reactionaries were dyed-in-the-wool Republicans at heart, but intelligent voters in the South are like they are everywhere else—sadly in the minority—and there was nothing they could do to prevent the unthinking from swallowing the Republican bait, and electing them as Democrats.

A moron has sense enough to know that a Republican cannot be elected to a major office in the South, unless the Democrats are hopelessly divided among themselves, as they were in 1928. Therefore, a man with Republican leanings living in the South, who wants to have a political career, has to live the life of a Democrat and run for office on the Democratic ticket, and that is exactly what they have been doing since the War Between the States.

Those Southern reactionaries in the House and Senate no more represent the true Democrats of the South than they do the Communists of Earl Browder. They are simply Republicans disguised as Democrats, and if you will check their votes on major legislation you can prove it for yourself.

Horizon In Utopia

THE NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR, so far as I am concerned, has come and gone. It arrived with trumpets the day I read in a New York newspaper that the fair had a machine which would cure hangovers for a quarter. The idea appeared to be that you and the hangover get into the machine and the thing jiggled you both around until you eventually became separated and went your different ways—the hangover putting out to sea and you going back to New York. I gathered that the general principle of the machine was somewhat similar to that of the cream separator, and that either you or the hangover, taking the cream role, rose to the top and floated away—probably the hangover, because few recent victims, however efficient the separation, would feel like floating.

Certainly this indicated that Millennium was putting its best foot foremost just around the corner. It was a time for patriots to hang flags in front of the house, to lay in extra supplies of telephone directories for shredding and to place large orders with the ticker tape dealers to be meet for celebration. Old sparks gleamed anew in the ashy eyes of ancients who had lived long in the hope of welcoming Millennium, only in their latter days to abandon hope.

Thousands in New York that day must have read their papers with a sense of renewing a lease with life, and rushed for the subway to Queens. That in itself would show to what fantastic heights a hope soared, for of all the hellish places to take a hangover, under the East River is by all odds the most hellish.

See them waking up in the Village, the East Side, Brooklyn and the Bronx, reflecting bitterly upon Life and Last Night. See their jaundiced eyes rapidly scanning the newspaper, coming to rest at last with an optical yelp on the piece about the hangover-curing machine. See the hasty searching of pockets, which yesterday had been green with bills (green bills now far away), to see if there is sufficient change to pay for two subway fares and 25 cents in addition for the machine. See, to make a long story short, the discovery of two dimes, the borrowing of 15 cents from the janitor, and the painful but blithe departure for the subway. And draw the curtain upon journey's end where disappointment waits.

As one of the ashy eyed ancients, who long since had despaired of welcoming any millennium bringing peace in our time for mornings after, I had been forced to abandon hangovers, to get my feet of evenings upon paths less roseate than those which lead but to the grave of the morning after. Nor, with old age gently cruising through the marrow of my bones, had I any great desire to return to the bibulous festivities of the stags at eve. And I am a skeptic.

Yet the spirit of the paladin of science caught me fair and fast. Clad in the pure white ermine of research, I was prepared to go to New York and, with all the accouterments of charity, offer my body to be burned. And pay the quarter.

I knew that I, and I alone, could provide the acid test for that machine. My hangovers are of pure-blooded stock, lineal descendants of those fierce, starved lions which Nero kept to make fast work of the candidates for Christian martyrdom. No other hangovers approach them. They have no peers. If the New York World's Fair had anything, they would know it. And they alone.

I telephoned the publicity department of the fair to make an appointment with the machine.

"What machine?" said the young lady on the phone.

"The hangover machine," I told her. (What other machine would there be?)

"Just a minute, I'll let you speak to Miss ——."

Miss —— got on the phone. I repeated my request.

"What machine?" asked Miss ——. More cold water on a crusade. But I repeated, "The hangover machine."

"I think you'd better speak to Mr. ——," said Miss ——.

It was Mr. —— (no kin, incidentally, to Miss——) who delivered the coup de grace. He explained somewhat stiffly (and a little angrily, I thought) that there was no such machine and the report in the newspaper had been a mistake. Whether his seeming anger was occasioned by the newspaper's optimistic report or whether he himself had tried the machine and found it wanting, I don't know.

So is the spirit of high emprise hewed down. I thanked Mr. —— and dispiritedly hung up the phone. For me the New York World's Fair had come and gone. It might never have been.

"What is the New York World's Fair," I asked myself, "what is any world's fair, without a machine that cures hangovers for a quarter?" The answer was "Nothing," and I knew it.

Since that melancholy day last fall when a crusader for science was stopped in his tracks, I have read that benzedrine sulphate will cure hangovers. I have read hopeful reports to the effect that insulin will do it. All right, I say, let the chemotherapists have their little day of fun. But I remain the skeptic. Tomorrow, there can be no doubt, they will awake with a headache—a very bad one.

The Senators Talked

OUR PRESIDENT stepped on a rake last week, and the handle hopped up and hit him in the eye. He then blamed the press for leaving the rake lying around. But, hell, paw, you done left that rake there your own se'f.

It was Mr. Roosevelt who called the Military Affairs Committee of the Senate for a conference on national defense and who said whatever he did say. As to whether he attempted to impose secrecy on the meeting, it is plain that at best, he balled up the understanding, because some Senators understood that they were so pledged. The President later denied that there had been a blanket pledge, but Senator Nye, for one, said he considered himself bound to silence. The fact is that some Senators obviously fudged a little around the edges, giving Washington reporters information which rattled the windows at home and abroad, involving a question of confidence between those Senators and the President. There is no such question as to the press.

It is an uncertain way of obtaining information, but not unethical. If a Senator, with a full sense of responsibility, wants to tell reporters, in general terms, what went on at such a meeting the problem of propriety is his own. He may figure that his duty and the public interest outweigh a question of propriety. Call it a question of honor, if you like, and the case is still the same.

Some Reporters Refuse 'Confidences'

A REPORTER who receives information under the seal of confidence has no such option. He is muzzled regardless of his own notions of the public interest. He may feel that he has made a mistake in accepting the confidence, believing that he would have been able to come by the same information elsewhere without restrictions. But still he must play ball.

Some reporters, however, refuse to accept confidences, and I have a distinct mental picture of Mike Haggerty, of the New York Times, on a couple of occasions when persons offered confidential information to groups of reporters, holding up his hand and saying "count me out. I am a newspaper reporter and not a confidant."

In saying that guesses were dressed up as statements of fact and criticizing some newspaper owners for that, the President lays a general charge of fakery against all the reporters on that story. He also smears the whole press by neglecting to specify what papers he means. He gives no evidence beyond his own arbitrary interpretation of a controversy to which he is a party.

Did Senators Take Notes?

IF SOME SENATORS did understand that parts of the discussion were privileged, while others thought it was all confidential, then there was no valid confidence at all, for in that case each man was to let his conscience and discretion be his guide. It would be enlightening to know whether the Senators were allowed to or did take notes during the discussion.

Reporters long ago overcame a tradition that it was amateurish or bush league to take notes on the ground that the sight of pencil and paper would tend to frighten the subject and make him choke up.

In London in my time some British officials refused to permit notes to be taken. That was their way out in case they overspoke themselves. They could say they had been misquoted. So the reporters trained themselves to concentrate and remember the exact phraseology of the answers.

Sepators Usually Reliable Informants

ON LEAVING THE ROOM they would huddle somewhere and make notes, consulting on doubtful points. Someone always would have a clear recollection of a questioned point, and, working together, we could reconstruct the story almost exactly, and certainly without important error.

The Senators in this case appear to have given inexact or free interpretations of the discussion, but, however that may be and regardless of the degree of confidence or violations by the Senators, the press is not involved unless Senators are to be classed as unreliable informants.

What reporter dressed up what guess as fact? If President Roosevelt would answer that question specifically we would have a good test case and a showdown on whether the press is at fault or merely taking the fall for an error by Mr. Roosevelt.

Text of President's Relief Message

To the Congress of the United States:

On Saturday, February 4, I approved House Joint Resolution No. 83 which appropriates $725,000,000 to continue the operations of the Works Progress Administration for the remaining five months of the current fiscal year.

I would have withheld my approval of this legislation on the ground of its inadequacy to meet human need and I would have immediately asked for a larger sum if it had not been for the provision that there shall not be a reduction of more than 5 per cent of the number of employes on Works Progress projects prior to April 1, 1939.

This proviso leads to the conclusion that the Congress stands ready during the balance of February and the month of March to reconsider actual needs in time to increase before April 1 the appropriation for the last three months of the fiscal year.

In my message to the Congress on January 5, 1939, I recommend a supplementary appropriation of $875,000,000. This was based on a program to give employment to 3,000,000 workers during February and March and to reduce this employment to an average of 2,700,000 workers in June. This estimated reduction of 300,000 workers by June took full cognizance of the economic recovery which might reasonably be anticipated.

Reserves Seen Low

Because it has been necessary during the first week of February to utilize all working capital and pay roll reserves normally maintained to protect the funds of the United States against over-obligation, it will also be necessary immediately to re-establish these reserves from the supplementary appropriation.

The net amount available to finance the Works Progress Administration from February 1 to June 30 is therefore $725,000,000.

In discussing the employment that can be provided for five months with $725,000,000 first consideration is given to the winter months of February and March. The joint resolution requires that reduction in employment in those months shall not exceed 5 per cent which reduction, if carried out, would mean the discharge of 150,000 employes.

However, I call your attention to the fact that the rolls have already been reduced by 350,000 since the last week of last October. As no new assignments have been made during this period, there has been a large accumulation of able-bodied people certified to us as in need of relief—people however who have not been able to secure places on the work program.

The need of these people is so apparent and so deserving that the rolls, in human decency, ought not to be reduced during February and March by even 5 per cent. After conferences with the Works Progress Administration it has been determined for the above reason to hold the rolls at the present figure of 3,000,000 persons during these two months.

Two Alternatives Cited

To employ these 3,000,000 people at the prevailing average monthly cost of $61 will require an expenditure of $366,000,000.

This will leave $359,000,000 for the months of April, May, and June.

Under the terms of the joint resolution this sum must be apportioned over the entire period to June 30. The administrator will have at his disposal an average of approximately $120,000,000 per month for these three months—providing an average employment of slightly less than 2,000,000 persons.

Two alternatives under the joint resolution are open to the administrator. The first is to reduce the rolls abruptly by 1,000,000 persons on the first of April and provide an average employment of 2,000,000 persons during the ensuing three months. This would result in throwing this very large number of persons out of employment suddenly. Such a number cannot possibly be absorbed by private industry in time to prevent extreme distress.

And I call your attention to the fact that on the average every person discharged from the rolls has dependent on him or her three other persons. In other words the greater part of 4,000,000 American will be stranded.

The second alternative is to commence a week-by-week reduction on April 1 and to carry this reduction through to June 30. Even on the assumption that all reserves which under proper governmental procedure should be maintained, were completely expended by June 30, such reduction would require that employment by the end of June will be reduced to a figure well below 1,500,000 persons.

In other words the program of present employment would be slashed considerably more than one-half within a period of three months.

2 Million to Lose Jobs

If, however, proper reserves were maintained at the end of the fiscal year, employment at the end of June would drop still further—to a figure of only slightly more than 1,000,000 persons.

Therefore, on a program of gradual reduction from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 persons would be thrown out of Works Progress Administration employment — or, with the addition of those dependent on them, from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 Americans would no longer receive Federal Government aid.

I ask that the Congress commence immediate consideration of these simple and alarming facts. The operations of the Works Progress Administration are of such magnitude that if a reduction such as I have above described has to be carried out, orderly and efficient planning requires that this be known definitely by the first week in March. It is equally important that the executive branch of the Government be informed at the earliest possible moment what additional funds, if any, will be available on and after April 1.

I invite the attention of the Congress to the fact that my recommendation for the larger amount was made to the Congress on January 5 and the joint resolution providing for a much reduced appropriation was presented for my consideration more than four weeks later.

Emergency Declared

In view of the foregoing considerations, I report to the Congress that in my opinion an emergency now exists, and that the facts constituting such emergency are as follows:

(a) That the rolls of the Works Progress Administration should be held at the present figure of 3,000,000 through the winter months of February and March to prevent undue suffering and to care in part for those persons who have been certified as in need, but have not been given employment.

(b) That the funds which have been provided by the Congress, if not supplemented, will require a very drastic reduction in the Works Progress Administration rolls commencing April 1, 1939, which would result in removing people from the work program in numbers far beyond those that could be absorbed by industry with any conceivable degree of recovery. Widespread want or distress would inevitably follow.

(c) That the need for orderly planning of the Works Progress Administration program requires that the administrator should know by the early part of March what funds will be at his disposal after April 1 and that, due to the time required for Congressional action, this can be brought about only by my reporting to the Congress on the situation at this time.

I therefore recommend to the Congress immediate consideration of legislation providing an additional sum of $150,000,000 for the Works Progress Administration to be available in the balance of the current fiscal year.

The TVA-Willkie Deal

A TENTATIVE agreement has been reached to sell the electric properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co. to TVA for $78,600,000.

The price is hailed in Wall Street as a victory for private industry, and, particularly, for Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, which controls the Tennessee Electric Power Co.

Mr. Willkie has been a tenacious and resourceful negotiator. For almost six years he has been the spearhead of the opposition to the great experiment in the Tennessee Valley. Backed by a large part of the utility business, and by related banking, industrial, and political interests, he has fought the TVA power program with all the weapons of publicity, politics and litigation. Last week the Supreme Court took away his shield by holding that the utilities affected by TVA had no right to immunity from Government competition.

TVA could have imposed a "Munich peace" on Mr. Willkie. If TVA were as ruthless and vengeful as it has been depicted as being in public utility propaganda, it could convert Mr. Willkie's Southern utility empire into a Hiterlized Czecho-Slovakia.

Instead TVA has agreed to a price which is more than $20,000,000 higher than its first offer. Prior to the latest Supreme Court decision it had already increased its offer by $10,000,000 to $67,000,000. Less than two months ago, in testifying before the Congressional investigation of TVA, J. A. Krug, TVA chief power planning engineer, said that the "final offer of $67,000,000 for the electric properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co. substantially exceeds their present value."

TVA Surcharge Rates Likely

MR. WILLKIE therefore seems entitled to a high degree of elation over the price of $78,600,000.

However, according to reliable sources, the first figure he dangled in front of the TVA negotiators was $106,000,000, which purported to be the value of the Tennessee properties as of January 1, 1938. From there he came down to around $94,000,000, a figure calculated from the evaluation of the properties made in 1926 by the Tennessee Public Utility Commission, with allowances for additional investments and depreciation.

The agreed price is a little closer to the original TVA offer than to the first figure pushed out by Mr. Willkie. According to TVA sources, this price can be paid without putting surcharges on TVA rates to the ultimate consumers.

Whether many of the individual municipalities will agree with the TVA verdict on this point remains to be disclosed. For TVA itself can buy only the transmission and generating properties. The local distributing systems must be bought by the cities and towns and rural co-operatives. When some of them see what their shares of the total deal are to be, they may agree that Mr. Willkie won a handsome victory.

The usual concern of the conservatives over excessive expenditures by Government vanished in the face of the TVA-Willkie negotiations. The budget balancers carp about relief outlays, and applaud when a few dollars here and there are chiseled out of the appropriation bills. But when the superior rights of investors are at stake, it is apparently the duty of the Government to err on the side of generosity. When private properties, instead of human lives, are to be salvaged, that is an error which Government in this country usually makes.

Other Utilities Relieved of Fear

IT IS WORTH something, however, to bring the TVA-Willkie feud to a close. It is worth something to relieve other utilities and prospective investors in them of the fear that they will not be dealt with liberally if their properties are "menaced" by Federal power projects.

Relieved of this fear, they do not need to clamor for a "Chinese wall"—the label given by TVA to the demand that limits be placed on territory in which publicly developed electricity is to be distributed.

For almost six years, Mr. Willkie and his allies have hampered a great Government undertaking duly authorized by Congress. In retrospect, they must wonder whether the result was worth the energy and expense. Who can say that they could not have obtained as good a price for their properties several years ago as they have been offered now? They have obtained an agreement to dispose of the poor territory with the rich. At one time TVA seemed intent on skimming the cream. For that there were several reasons, among them the fact that at the outset few persons believed—or if they believed, dared to say—that the distribution of TVA power would be socialized on such a great scale. As late as 1936 several of Mr. Roosevelt's power advisers were still thinking of a power "pool" rather than in terms of public ownership of all distribution systems in TVA territory.

Not the least ironic aspect of the TVA controversy is the applause which Wall Street is now showering on what, in the last analysis, is a clean-out victory for socialism.

TVA And The Democratic Process

THE PUBLIC announcement that the TVA has made a settlement with the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation for the acquisition of all its Tennessee electric properties at a fair going-concern value has far-reaching significance, both for economic recovery and for the application of the democratic process to the enormously enlarged and multiplied administrative agencies and institutions that constitute now the real Government.

In the last two years this column has developed and stressed two themes on the utility problem: (1) That fair treatment to the utilities and the private investments in that great industry constitute an indispensable prerequisite for releasing durable-goods investment and resuming the process of re-employment of labor and capital, as against going on with the patch-work of subsidies and deficits that perpetuate anti-employment and keep down the standards of living and income of our whole society and economy; (2) that the elimination of the arbitrary and unfair policies toward the utility industry and utility investors and the development of rules, rational procedures and common standards for the conduct of public corporations in their interactions with private industry—all that is an integral part of the adaptation of the democratic process to administrative government and a vindication of the original and fundamental American principle that this shall "be a Government of laws and not of men."

A Vindication Of Democracy

AFTER FIVE YEARS of struggle, we are just emerging into daylight, and have successfully written one chapter in the democratic book of the relations of Government to industry.

From the point of view of the issues involved in that struggle, the settlement reached over the week-end is a vindication of the democratic method that two men have pursued as pioneers in their respective positions, namely Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, as the oppressed head of the TVA, who was prevented by the radical extremists from carrying out just and workable policies, and Mr. Wendell L. Willkie, as the head of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, who bore the brunt of the fight to save the industry from threatened disinvestment.

Dr. Arthur Morgan realized from the start that larger issues were involved, and hence refused to be a party to the tactics and methods that the power division of the TVA sought to apply to the private utilities, deeming them a safe target on account of their past abuses.

When, after five years of vain struggle, he was compelled to take the issue to the public, Dr. Morgan declared: "More than cheap power is at stake: A new element of democratic decency can be introduced into public life. The sovereign government is under obligation not to make capricious or arbitrary use of its power, but to act with restraint and fairness and without a spirit of retaliation."

In respect to the concrete issues involved between the TVA and the private industries in the territory, he laid down a procedure which is nonetheless right for the Government because it is also right for the citizens and their economic interests: "Public officials should cease coercion by subsidies or threats of constructing duplicating systems if arbitrary fixed prices are not accepted, or by threats of disruption of private systems with the effect of preventing refinancing of private companies."

Going Concern Value Fixed by Joint Body

THE DEAL MADE by Mr. Willkie and the utility engineers was on the basis of going-concern value of the investment as fixed by a firm of accountants jointly selected. This is in conformity with the demand that Mr. Willkie repeatedly made for determination of the fair price by experts or by the arbitration of eminent disinterested public figures.

It, incidentally, conforms to the policy which Dr. Morgan called upon the authority itself to adopt, namely, where a community wishes to undertake public ownership "the existing private properties should be taken over," on an integral instead of a dismemberment basis, "at a fair price as determined by agreement or by impartial appraisal."

Just as Dr. Morgan, as a champion of fair and orderly public administration, was fostering sound business recovery, so Mr. Willkie, as the trustee for his corporation and stockholders, has been making a genuine contribution to the democratic process and to progressive co-operative relations between Government and business.

He, too, followed the harder way of defending an unpopular cause, in terms of public interest, and evoking and making into an articulate force what the Federalist has called "the deliberate sense of the community to govern the conduct of those to whom they entrust the management of their affairs."

The very enlargement and varied complexity of the field of relationships between Government and business render it almost a public duty to follow that way as against the easier and more tempting way of "back-door" influence and "playing the game."

Silent and round,
Waiting a call from God,
Under the ground,
Snowdrop and crocus wait,
Soil hard and hoary
Folds them in humble state,
Longs for their glory.

A Louisiana barber has been giving away hamburgers with haircuts. The idea is to make the onion breath mutual.

The Yanks and Giants have arranged to broadcast their games this year under the sponsorship of a gasoline, a soap and a breakfast food company. Presumably the gasoline company will come in when the pitcher blows up, the soap company will speak when a batter cleans up the bases, and the breakfast food talk will come when a batter pops one into the "oatfield."

The bases now are full . . . Oh, boy!

Here comes the pitch! . . . The batter swings!

Baseball Wonder Boy

George N. Weiss, now second in command of the Yankees, is a home-town boy who hade good in the big leagues. George is a New Havener. His dad used to run a grocery store out Dixwell avenue, and we remember seeing George trying to learn the grocery business.

It was fairly obvious that the "Send me up a peck of potatoes, a pound of pork chops, a dozen eggs, a head of lettuce and two bars of soap" stuff would ultimately bore him. George got into amateur baseball back home, staging Sunday games at first. Then, when State league baseball was dead, he revived it at Lighthouse Point, in the old ball park hard by the two Spanish War cannons.

George revived baseball with a bang, and he was just a kid in those days. Then he packed up and went to Newark. For a long time he was the Yankees' top farm man. And now he has Ed Barrow's old job. Watch George, the old Dixwell avenue grocery boy! He's going places.

"Fur-bearing Fish Found in Colorado."—Headline. Old stuff, according to Elmer Twitchell, the famous piscatorial expert. "I found fur-bearing fish years ago," he declares. "In fact, I bred 'em for the pelts. Know what killed the business?"

"No," we replied.

"Moth-fish," replied Elmer.

Coercion of Taxi Men Charged in Taking Insurance

Charges that certain taxicab association officials forced their members to patronize "favored" insurance companies have been lodged with the Public Utilities Commission, and it is expected they will be aired at the public hearing in the District Building this morning on proposed changes in rates and zones.

Commission officials pointed out that each taxicab owner may insure his vehicle in any company he desires and should not be "swayed by any official."

Suggestions for rate changes to be laid before the commission include: First zone, from 20 to 30 cents; second, from 30 to 40 cents; third, from 50 to 60 cents, and fourth from 70 to 80 cents.

Welfare Pension Termed Answer to Economic Problem

By the Associated Press.

Representative Leavy (Democrat), Washington, told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday the general welfare pension plan would "aid greatly in solving the economic problems" of the Nation.

"It doesn't add to the national debt," he said, "because the dollars collected are the dollars spent."

The general welfare pension program contemplates monthly benefits of $30 to $80 for persons over 60, from returns from a 2 per cent gross income tax on monthly income in excess of $100.

'Idiot's Delight' Still Delights the Sapient

Film Version of Sherwood Play Able Work; 'Tobacco Road' Reveals Amazing Vitality; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SINCE Robert E. Sherwood is the author of the screen play adapted from Robert E. Sherwood's stage play—and a Pulitzer Prize winner, at that—of "Idiot's Delight," there would seem to be scant justification for quibbling over the manner in which a sensational success has been translated into celluloid.

BELL

Mr. Sherwood, nevertheless, seems to have rectified some of the matters concerning which this department voiced complaint upon the occasion of the play's first presentation on the stage of the National Theater, with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in the stellar roles. Our objection then was that "Idiot's Delight" presented a dramatic panorama that was too much diffused. It centered in no specific characters, but depicted the devastating consequences of a tremendously big war on conspicuously little people. Their helplessness and hopelessness was abysmal. But still the drama refused to concern itself with the problem of any individual trapped in the high Alps as the warring planes began to drop bombs.

In the picture, this treatment has been considerably modified by the prefixing of a prologue that makes Harry and Irene, the two old troupers, who meet under unique circumstances in strange places, far removed from Omaha, the figures in whom interest unfailingly and continuously reposes. Throughout the movement of the drama, of course, its action has been devised to meet the requirements of the wider and more comprehensive scope of the cinema. There are incidents in the film that never were on the stage and, also, there were subtleties and nice gradations of character on the stage that somehow seem to have been lost from the gelatin footages.

But Mr. Sherwood conclusively knows his theater, whether of flesh and blood or celluloid. "Idiot's Delight" will prove one of the most enjoyed "box-office" attractions of the year. Those who reveled in the original stage play may not be wholly satisfied; those who never saw it will be confident in their own minds that nothing could have been better than the version that spreads itself across the silver sheet.

Perhaps this latter group will be right. There will be opportunity to judge when "Idiot's Delight" opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow.

Mr. Sherwood Knows His Way Around the Theater

Mr. Sherwood, incidentally, always has been one to discuss the content and treatment of his plays graciously and patiently. As I have said, he seems to have recanted slightly in the matter of "Idiot's Delight" and its form and substance for the purposes of the cameras and microphones. Since his work was awarded the Pulitzer Prize in its year and grossed something in excess of $2,000,000—or was it $3,000,000?—the towering author could not have been very far wrong in his estimation of what constitutes a theatrical undertaking of the first rank. Still he was willing to listen to feeble and half-baked remonstrances with regard to this particular play that seem, somehow, to have crept into the film in a realized form. It is interesting to recall that Raymond Massey appeared in "Idiot's Delight" in London. It was he, of course, who achieved the first overwhelming hit of the local season at the National in Mr. Sherwood's monumental play of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." Mr. Massey never was able to catch my point of view with regard to "Idiot's Delight." We agreed on practically everything else.

If you possess the patience to endure another thought on this famous play, it would have to do with the inspired title which it bears. Having passed through some of the most vicious fighting days of the Great War, Mr. Sherwood selected his title with a view to epitomizing his free notions of the motivation, in presumably high places, of armed conflict. His editorial instinct is highly emblazoned in the expression, in two words, of the only feasible basis that can exist for the precipitation of international slaughter.

So today will come the screening of "The Beachcomber," starring Charles Laughton, under his own aegis, and Elsa Lanchester, Mrs. Laughton in private life. This preview will be made all the more interesting and enjoyable by reason of the recent receipt of Miss Lanchester's book, "Charles Laughton and I," already briefly celebrated in these columns. There is a great deal of humor in Miss Lanchester's descriptions of the making of this film and the elements that entered into it. The degree to which the film will fulfill the gayety of Mrs. Laughton's printed words remains to be seen.

An Old War Horse Continues to Snort!

Perhaps the most amazing phenomenon of the contemporary theater is the tenacity with which Jack Kirkland's play of "Tobacco Road" clings to the interest of theatergoers in all parts of the country. Interest is most intense in places where it might be least expected.

For instance, Carlton Miles, whose association with the touring companies of this fabulous production has amounted almost to a life career, reveals that, contrary to all expectations, "Tobacco Road" has achieved some of its most notable box-office successes in the specific portions of the United States of which it treats in such frank and revelatory terms. The so-called "Deep South" has taken the piece to its heart. It even has expressed the belief, according to Mr. Miles, that Mr. Kirkland was too mild, instead of too drastic, in his description of the plight of the Georgia sharecroppers.

It all seems to resolve itself into a matter of the theatergoers of the Nation having accepted this dramatization of the Erkskine Caldwell novel as a true picture, now that after a prodigious number of years the play has escaped the early stigma of its blasting and blistering speech. "Tobacco Road" no longer shocks audiences. It merely entertains and informs them.

This is proved by the extraordinary business the play has been doing on tour, in this, its fifth or sixth season. It has shattered all earlier records on its most recent return engagements. It is expected to do the same thing at the National Theater when it plays its fifth local date, and sixth week, beginning Monday night, February 20. The top price for this showing of the somber exposition of underprivileged life will be $1.50.

It might be of interest in this connection to recall that "Tobacco Road" was played twice at the National by Henry Hull, creator of the role of Jeeter Lester; was played at the Belasco by Taylor Holmes, later seen as Secretary Morgenthau, with George M. Cohan, in "I'd Rather Be Right," and, most recently, was presented at the National with John Barton in the stellar role. It is this Mr. Barton who will return a fortnight, more or less, hence. James Barton, who followed Henry Hull as Jeeter in New York, is about to retire from the original cast—if he has not already done so—worn down by endless performances of the picturesque and blasphemous role. He may go back in for the New York World's Fair engagement, which is expected to add new millions to the many that already have seen the play.

Piano Goes With Brent on Trips

Its first trip will be to Brent's favorite "hideout" near Palm Springs, where the actor intends to go immediately after he has finished his role opposite Bette Davis in "Dark Victory." If he can get away long enough to go to Europe and enjoy the winter sports at St. Moritz, Brent will take the miniature piano there with him too.

Brent says he has reached the point in his piano lessons where if he stops practicing, even briefly, he'll never start again. That's why he bought the little piano.

Finally Dies a Natural Death

Paul Guilfoyle, known as the "screen's most murdered actor," finally gets a chance to die a natural death. He won this opportunity when he was signed to portray Alfred Nobel in "Am I to Blame?" latest edition of John Nesbitt's Passing Parade series.

Guilfoyle claims he has met violent death in nine out of every ten of the roles he has played on the stage and screen.

"I was shot in 'Winterset,'" he explained, "frozen in 'Sky Giant' and drowned in my latest, 'Pacific Liner.'"

ANN SHERIDAN,

the talented featured player on the Warner Brothers lot, who gradually is assuming a stature of some importance among the younger of the cinema's actresses and seems destined for eventual stardom. Her latest appearance is with John Garfield in "They Made Me a Criminal," currently at the Metropolitan. Miss Sheridan also writes letters, as you will discover on this page today

A Brilliant Young Actress Describes Hollywood Trend

An interesting letter has come to the drama desk from one of the more promising of the young screen actresses. It is reproduced herewith, en toto and verbatim.

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 4, 1939.

Dear Nelson: If I were an editor on a big newspaper in Washington, D. C., I'd no doubt feel much more interested in the important things about me than I would in faraway Hollywood—that is, I imagine I would. But I guess the old saying that it takes all kinds of people and all kinds of interests to make up a world applies even in our country's Capital and even in these strenuous times.

Things have been rather strenuous in Hollywood in recent months also, I mean, they have been strenuous for me, personally, although that is only relatively important to other people, and for the entire industry.

The motion picture colony has seen the greatest wave of interest in our country's own affairs, historical and economic, that you can imagine.

One cannot drift off into the wings of any motion picture set in between "takes" without hearing discussions of important problems.

When we were making the location scenes of "Dodge City" at Modesto, Calif., a couple of weeks ago, it was a pleasure for me to hear "Big Boy" Williams, who, like myself, hails from Texas, hold his own with the local California cattle raisers on the subject of steer beef and tariffs on meat. "Big Boy," who was a hero in this picture, and Bruce Cabot and Victor Jory, who played the villains, had all worked as cowhands. Cabot was raised in New Mexico. Jory came originally from Alaska, but worked for several years in Montana. They made a Dallas girl, like me, feel right at home.

Stories of Old West

Speaking of the "Dodge City" picture, and the venturesome riding that our cast had to do for its exciting scenes, this is only one of a series of pictures which the studios are making with authentic stories and locales of the old west, in mind. Besides "Dodge City" in which I appeared for Warner Bros. and in which I played the queen of the historic old Kansas dance hall of frontier days, "The Lady Gay," Olivia deHavilland was the socially acceptable heroine, and Errol Flynn was the handsome star who came up from Texas over the Chisholm Trail, and became the town marshal of the "wildest city in the world." That was in 1872.

It isn't so wild now, because I have been through Dodge City in recent years, and we may all go back there for the big premiere of our picture this spring.

Some of the other big pictures which are following the "western trend," now that American audiences are known to be wearying of the glorifying of heroes of foreign countries, are "Stage Coach," which Walter Wanger is producing; "Union Pacific," by Cecil DeMille, and the story of Sam Houston titled "Man of Conquest" which Richard Dix is making at Republic Studio. "The Texans" and "Jesse James" have already gone into release as the advance guard of this kind of picture.

These happen to be only some outcroppings of the film industry's impulse toward American themes and patriotic subjects.

Mr. Harry M. Warner has been responsible for a very arresting series of Technicolor pictures which present some of the high spots of our country's history.

At present Warner Brothers Studio is engaged in filming "Sons of Liberty," which takes up the little known story of the financing of George Washington's tattered army in its lowest days.

More History on Screen

John Huston, the writer, and William Wyler, the producer, are announced as preparing to film "Prelude to Freedom," which covers the eight years and the historic matters in the two Presidential Administrations of Thomas Jefferson. The Twentieth Century-Fox Studio is preparing to film "Alexander Graham Bell."

Our own studio already has released one of the most stirring pictures that has been made in years, both as to action and patriotic theme. This is "Wings of the Navy," and it provides any filmgoer with his own answer as to the question of our country's preparedness to defend itself against the threat of a foreign invasion from the air.

It probably will strike you as a bit unusual, to have your red-haired Hollywood correspondent suddenly go serious on you in her first written report, but I believe that little Annie Sheridan is not the only Hollywood person to give way, for the time, to serious thoughts. The whole assemblage of glamour girls and tall, dark and handsome fellows is doing the same thing out here.

Or perhaps—and this is a secret I wouldn't confide to everybody—it is the school-teacher blood coming to the surface in your correspondent.

Somehow, the North Texas State Teachers College may be far removed from Hollywood, but some of it lingers on in the blood.

The Fairbanks, Pere and Fils, Tussle Mildly

Douglas, Jr., Seems Always Too Young for His Pappy's Plans

By Frederick C. Othman
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Feb. 7.—The Douglas Fairbankses—junior and senior—seem to be having another difference of opinion.

The bronze-skinned senior, who once forbade his son to become an actor, was attempting to sign him today to star in a movie, but without any luck whatever.

When Doug, jr., was 14, and came home with an offer from a picture studio, his father banged the table and shouted:

"You're too young to be an actor. Get an education first and we'll see about it later."

Junior didn't pay too much attention to that. He tried several schools briefly, married Joan Crawford, who later divorced him, and played in all kinds of movies. He's an established star now—but he's still arguing with pop.

The elder Fairbanks is trying to land his son as star of "The Californian," which he will produce soon for United Artists, but junior refuses unless he also can be a producer.

Still Too Young!

"You're too young to be a producer," his father said, pounding the table again. "Keep on being an actor. Keep on being a star. When I think you're ready to be a producer, we'll talk about it."

Fairbanks the elder is pround of his only son and, as he puts it:

"We're having the matter out in exactly the same way any producer argues with any star. I want Doug. on my star list. He wants to be there, but he wants to be a producer, too, and there you have a strictly professional tussle."

Champion movie fan of Hollywood is Margaret Lockwood—but then she's been here only two weeks.

Miss Lockwood is the green-eyed, dark-haired British girl (she sounds like Scarlet O'Hara) brought here by Twentieth Century-Fox to play in two movies. The first is "Susannah of the Mounties." The second hasn't been decided upon yet. There won't be any third, because Miss Lockwood is too anxious to return home to Rupert Leon, her husband of 16 months.

He's a steel salesman, working on a British government contract. He couldn't come with his bride and she'd hardly landed before she wanted to return to him. The studio persuaded her to stay and they put the picture into immediate production to take her mind off her loneliness.

Miss Lockwood, who was born in India and who has played in 15 London-made movies, said she had seen every motion picture ever released in England.

"I never saw less than one a day," she said. "Sometimes they'd pile up on me and I'd see three."

Oil Helps Props Light Candles

The prop boys on the set of Joan Crawford's new starring picture, "Ice Follies of 1939," established a new record recently. Three of them lit 305 candles ornamenting a banquet table in exactly three minutes. They revealed that their secret was a drop of oil on each wick to make it ignite instantly.

National Anthem

headlining this week's stage bill at Loew's Capitol with his orchestra. The Capitol is under the supervisory control of Carter Barron. Carter is a brother of "Red" Barron, All-American football star. Now if someone would just nickname Carter "White," you'd have it!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 7.—The town's been ringing with conflicting stories as to why Hedy Lamarr's picture "I Take This Woman" was shelved, after nearly a million dollars was spent on it. Two of our best directors worked on it. They changed one of the principal parts from Fannie Brice to Ina Claire. Well, let's stop right here. There must have been something wrong with the script if they could replace Fannie Brice with Ina Claire. And there was! Which goes right back to Mr. Shakespeare—the play's the thing! It's taken our people years to find it out, and they've spent millions of dollars trying to prove otherwise.

HEDDA HOPPER

I heard a honey about this the other day. Probably not true, but funny. Charlie MacArthur, who wrote the story, called in his pal, Ben Hecht, to read it. Hecht said, "Throw away the first 40 pages, begin from there." Charlie's supposed answer was, "I can't—they've already shot that!"

Have you heard how Gary Cooper met Anthony Eden? They crossed on the same boat from England. Gary was dying to meet him, but you know how shy he is. One day when he was in the process of being steamed alive in the Turkish bath in his birthday suit, he looked up and there opposite him was Anthony Eden. Mr. Eden said, "Oh, Mr. Cooper I've wanted to meet you ever since I knew you were on this boat." Gary, anxious to get the European low-down, was still too shy to ask questions. He didn't have to, Eden went right on talking. But when you ask for any little tid-bits, Gary takes the English attitude—"Well, it looks as though they were in quite a mess over there."

There's something very sweet and yet pathetic about the devotion of Arleen Whelan and Nancy Kelly. Arleen, as you know, got a big build-up, was given a part before she was ready and Nancy Kelly replaced her in "Jesse James." Arleen follows Nancy around as she would an adored elder sister, with a look of bewilderment in her eyes.

Our luscious Beebe got a cover on "Life" but only $250 a week when he worked in "Cafe Society." Elsa Maxwell turned down $10,000 for that same picture. Now, I understand she'll get more than five times that trifling sum from Mr. Zanuck.

"Yes, My Darling Daughter" is filled with fun, frolic and facts about the younger generation. And the censorship scissors snipped before sin reared its curly head. I couldn't tell whether it was mama, papa or daughter who emitted the loudest guffaws at the preview. If all grandmothers were as understanding as Mae Robson, and friends of the family as good as Roland Young, the young de-generation could its own problems.

David Selznick's "Made for Each Other" is a super-production with super-acting clothing a B-minus story. And yet it has all the elements for greatness. Carole Lombard gives a beautifully sincere performance. Jimmy Stewart's always good. Charles Coburn's underplaying steals every scene he is in. I adored Lucille Watson. It should have been outstanding.

Understand Joe Schenck has a lot of money in "The American Way." You know, that play they're asking $300,000 for. And it looks as though Joan Crawford might do a play for the Group Theater in New York. I understand she put money into that project. I personally hope she'll stick to the movies—the Big City is too far away.

Mary Martin, whose option wasn't up when she was geting $75 a week here, is now being offered $500 a week by the movies. But she's very happy in her play, "Leave It to Me," and her nightly stint at the Rainbow Room.

"The Lady From Kentucky" has been changed to "The Gambler and the Lady"—no matter how you try, a gambler takes first billing!

Now we have Dr. Leo Rosten, who got a grant from the Carnegie Foundation and will remain with us until 1941, doing research on Hollywood. My, aren't we interesting? Wonder how you get one of those Carnegie Medals?

The reason Ina Claire spends so much time in San Francisco is 6 feet 2, dark and handsome. And a swell dancer. The Burlingame girls have set up a wailing wall!

News must be mighty scarce, because one of our papers gave the birth of Wendy Hiller's baby a notice and a re-write in the same paper.

Now that Universal is going in for re-makes of some of our better pictures, I wish they'd do "Merton of the Movies" with Jimmy Stewart. He'd be wonderful.

Diana Barrymore wants to do that play with her father, but mother Michael Strange says no! nO! NO!

A handkerchief concession has tried to buy space in the theaters where "Dark Victory" will soon play. Some of my friends are having their eyelashes dyed, so they won't ruin their make-up—yes, it's that good!

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Sees Absentee Fiance Only Once in 3 Months; He Seldom Writes; Does He Love Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 20, considered very pretty and very popular, especially with the opposite sex. I am in love with a handsome man of 21 and he says he loves me. We have talked of marriage and expect to be married some day, after he has put his brother through college, which will take at least two years yet. I went with him one year, back home, before my work brought me here. We parted with the understanding that each would be free to have dates, since it would be possible for us to see each other only about once every three months.

I have been here one year and during that time have been home twice, and he has been here twice to see me. But the trouble is—he writes me only about once between visits. I write him about three times before I get an answer. Then he is very apologetic and always gives excuses. But I am getting tired of excuses. I get so blue and discouraged when I don't hear from him. Do you think he still loves me? Or am I just being narrow-minded?

I am going home on another visit soon, and was undecided whether to write and let him know I was coming, or just go home without seeing him. Then he learned from my father that I would be coming home. So he wrote and said he wanted to see me when I get there. Do you think I should answer his letter? If so, what should I say? I would like to have your opinion immediately. Sincerely,

LONELY.

Discovering the Truth

DEAR LONELY: In my opinion, the thing to do here is to proceed, with mystifying amiability, to turn the tables on the young man. Acknowledge receipt of his latest letter, with a brief and friendly note saying when you will be home, and that you are, of course, looking forward to seeing him. Don't stress your anticipation; just state it in a casual, matter of fact sort of way. Then, when you do get home and do see him, make no mention of your persistent unhappiness at his chronic failure to keep in touch with you by correspondence.

If the subject is brought up, let him take the initiative in introducing it, and brush his apologies (if any) aside, as if you had thought little or nothing about it. On your return here, don't give him a follow-up word or sign unless and until he addresses you first. Give him the opportunity of waiting, worrying and wondering for a change. That is only being fair, to yourself and to him—and will do more than anything else to clarify, for both, the nature of his current interest in, and intentions toward, you.

He may be the sort of person who regards letter writing as punitive labor, to be evaded and postponed as long as possible. He may be as short on conversation as he is on correspondence, and find it both awkward and exceedingly difficult to put his thoughts into words, spoken or written. He may suppose the understanding between you is so well established and mutually accepted that it doesn't need to be fed on a constant exchange of reminders and reassurances. Or he may be, of course, rather stolidly taking you for granted, finding personal satisfaction in your wistful or ardent messages without having the grace and generosity to reply in kind.

However, no matter how much he may loathe letter writing, or shrink from committing his sentiments to paper—if he is seriously and sincerely counting on you to be his wife, he will write to you, both urgently and articulately, once he finds himself confronting a bewildering silence from your end of the line. Supposing you were still living at home, I dare-say you wouldn't telephone him two or three times in intervals of not seeing him, lest in so doing you take the edge off his eager interest in you. You would wait in patience for him to take the initiative in promoting a contact.

Since correspondence is, in essence, but an amplification of—or necessitous substitute for—immediate social interchange, it should be governed by the same rules of behavior, if mutually satisfactory results are to obtain. To this end, I advise you to be somewhat less aggressive, persistent and reproachful in this epistolary exchange. M. H.

Small Home Needs Dining Room

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

ALL POLITICS aside, I have to take issue with Mrs. Roosevelt on the subject of dining rooms. She thinks they can very well be dispensed with in the small home of moderate means. And so they can, but not very conveniently.

If there's a family of children—and people still have them, as Mrs. Roosevelt should know—there are regular meals to serve. And eating in a corner of the living room gets to be pretty tiresome three times a day. It's all right for the career girls you read about who eat breakfast on the fly and just have dinner at home now and then for a lark. Or for a young couple just starting out.

But I say, for convenience's sake, that the lady with a busy, active family had better think twice before she gives up her separate dining room. There are so often problems of finding space for so many straight chairs in the combination room, not to mention the question of storage space for linen, silver, china and glass.

Another point to consider in the active family is the fact that the living room is kept busy doing its own job properly without having to double up. And I always feel there's something to be said for maintaining the dignity of a dining room and respect for the fine ritual of dining. Goodness knows, manners and tranquility are hard enough to achieve at best . . . somehow a dining room seems to make that easier.

Cowboy Belts for Novel Dinner Gowns

High waists which almost touch the chin have recently made front-page news and here are two typical examples. Tiny waists have been achieved by the cowboy belts which are placed as high as the law allows. Both of these fluidly draped gowns are perfect for Southern wear and ideal for chatty dinners at home

To afford your guests food for table talk, dine in the striped silk jersey (left). A sleek girdle of suede sparkles with nail heads, tinkles with jingle bells. The skirt is as wide as that of a whirling dervish. The girl above wears Florida cloth in a sophisticated tone of greige. Wristlets of pigskin match the nailhead-studded belt

A Woman's New York

New York, Feb. 7.

THERE WAS an especially gala night at the Metropolitan Opera a few evenings ago. Charpentier's opera, "Louise," was taken from the moth balls for the use of that gorgeous Tennessee blonde, Grace Moore. And when the final curtain fell the local critics seemed agreed that not since Mary Garden did the piece here these many years ago has such an excellent performance of a fairly feeble opera been given at the dear old "Met."

ALICE HUGHES

This was a special stunt for La Moore. She has been coached in the role by the composer himself, still hale and hearty in Paris, at 78. To quote the inspired pundit of the Times, "Her voice has developed in late years in quality and volume; there is more security, a finer conception of pitch." Which seems to indicate La Moore is doing all right. This, after her brief acclaim in Hollywood. But I'll bet Grace prefers the cheers of the faithful at the Metropolitan!

Even so, my happiest memories of this beautiful woman and sincere artist hover about the days when she was just the prima donna of the "Music Box Revue" on Broadway, and sang some of the prettiest tunes Irving Berlin ever wrote, notably, "All Alone." Ah, she's come far and fast since then, with the "Met" reviving a slumbering opera strictly in her honor. Even so—I'll still take Grace Moore on the stage of the Music Box Theater, singing simple songs. It's my privilege, whatever her current stature in the opera world. And I cling to it!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Benay Venuta, that other big, handsome blonde, is planning to give up her part in "Kiss the Boys Good-by" and her radio hour and go on a six-month tour to Tahiti with her husband, if current reports are to be trusted. And does that start the envy to boiling over in poor old Aunt Alice, desk-bound and not feeling any too hot, either.

Is it true that the French darling, Daniele Darrieux, is really coming back to us very soon to work opposite Bing Crosby in a movie? That's the tip on local Times Square.

Ever since Erin O'Brien-Moore caught fire from a carlessly handled match in a restaurant, a determined drive has been launched here against such carelessness in eating houses and especially in theaters when the house is dark. Of all the idiots I know, the most vicious are those who light matches to read their programs when the house lights are down. Especially since these little pencil-flashlights are so inexpensive and handy.

These snoods! The other day I saw Claire Luce, lunching at Vince Astor's St. Regis, wearing one of gray fishnet along with a gray suit and a gray caracul coat. She looked mighty nice . . . Our great bard singers die and no one takes their places any more. I mourned deeply the death of the brilliant W. B. Yeats the other day. Read a few of his lyrics, in his memory, and for the good of your souls . . .

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Women With Beautiful Figures Usually Spend Much Time in Exercise and Watch Their Diet

ARE YOU inclined to think the women who are nice and slim are all just naturally that way? Then the first thing for you to do is to get over the idea that the beautiful figure is a fixture for life. It can't last without a little work on the part of the possesor.

You might be quite surprised, moreover, to find that some of the women, who are the most streamlined have reduced from 50 to 60 pounds and have exercised as much as 6 inches off the hips. Here are three letters which should wake you up to the possibilities of your own figure.

The first sounds so good that you'll probably think I made it up, but it from a hard-working reducer in St. Louis, Mo.: "I am delighted to tell you that I have followed the Twenty-one Day Diet for six weeks and have lost exactly 22 pounds! At the beginning I weighed 132 pounds, and now I weigh 110 pounds. I am 5 feet 2 inches tall. And do I ever look nice!

Loses 4 Inches

"Why, I look like a million dollars in a dirndl dress—my waist is so tiny! I lost 4 inches off the waist, 6 off the hips and 2 off the bust. My measurements are now: Bust, 34 inches; waist, 26 inches; hips, 34 inches. Perhaps due to the omission of sweets, my complexion is much clearer; I want to say 'thank you' from the bottom of my heart."

"Well, that letter proves the magic of exercise . . . imagine losing 8 inches off the hips with only 22 pounds weight loss!

The next letter is from Dearborn, Mich., and it wasn't made up, either! "I've reduced from 148 pounds to 119! And as a reward, my husband is giving me a new spring outfit and a trip to New York. It is nice to know he is so proud of my figure. I have been married five years and have two sons."

Any man is proud of a wife who keeps her figure—and more proud of one who has the courage to regain her figure after she has lost it. Our Dearborn reducer worked out a practical idea for menu planning which you will find useful. She kept a recipe file with the approximate number of calories in a serving. Then, when she prepared a meal, its caloric value was right there before her.

Warns Against Speed

A Seattle, Wash., reducer is doing such a grand job that I hope she will not spoil everything by taking the weight off too fast. She writes: "I have followed your principles of reducing, using my own menus and calorie sheet, and have lost 55 pounds in just four months. I read your articles every day, as they bolster up my courage for the day's reducing. I still weigh 200 pounds and have 75 pounds yet to lose, but next Fourth of July I intend to weigh 125 pounds. That will be a loss of 135 pounds in a year. Do you think I can do it?"

My reply to this reducer would be that I know she can, but I hope she won't! After losing weight that rapidly, any reducer would be very wise to have a physical checkover by a doctor and ask his advice as to whether it would be safe to lose 75 more pounds. The reducer who plans her own menus should make certain they contain adequate amounts of vitamins, minerals and protein.

Listlessness, Fatigue of Aged May Be Battled by Tonics and Proper Nourishment

Physicians and nurses who are not used to treating elderly persons often are puzzled by a peculiar state of listlessness, and mental confusion and fatigue. There is a slight temperature and a soreness of the tongue and a general digestive upset.

This condition is well known to specialists in diseases of old age, geriatrics, and is called senile toxemia. The first symptoms usually complained of are weakness, loss of sleep, loss of appetite and lack of strength. Treatment usually is satisfactory. The diet should be maintained whether there is appetite present or not. Bitter tonics containing small amounts of nux vomica in gentian compound bring about a rapid restoration.

Contradictions

In the general care of the aged we meet with very contradictory advice, especially from old people themselves, who are very liable to ascribe their advanced years to some particular thing that they have been doing all their lives. For instance, William Cullen Bryant said:

"I have reached a pretty advanced period of life—78 years and four months—without the usual infirmity of old age. How far this is the effect of my way of life is perhaps uncertain. I arise early, at this time of year about half past five. I immediately, with very little encumbrance of clothing, begin a series of exercises for the most part designed to expand the chest. These are performed with dumbells and pole and a horizontal bar. After a full hour of this, I bathe from head to foot. My food is simple—hominy and milk and apples for breakfast. After breakfast I walk to the office of the 'Evening Post,' nearly 3 miles distant, and after three hours walk home. In the country I am engaged in my literary task until a feeling of weariness drives me out into the open air and I go into my garden and prune the trees or perform other work."

This may have been all right for William Cullen Bryant, but it would certainly kill most of the old people I know. The only conclusion we can reach is that William Cullen Bryant must have been pretty husky to begin with.

Perhaps one conclusion to the question of the care of the aged is to let them do what they want to do, because they are probably going to do it anyway.

"Did you ever see such a mob? And there are just scads of men, Henry. You see I told you! Oh hello, Harriet! . . . Yes, I managed to drag him along. My dear! What he thinks of modern art! But I tell him it's all a matter of emotional reaction. Yes! You've simply got to feel these things, just relax yourself and let them speak to you.

"Isn't it marvelous to see such a crowd? It just goes to show that people here do appreciate good things—say isn't that a stunning hat on Marcia Burlap! She's the type that can wear a wimple. . . . Say, who is that with her? . . . Oh, yes, Montgomery Aspic. You see, Henry, I told you there'd be men here.

"Will you come with us, Harriet? . . . Let's look at this still life—Oh how do you do? . . . How do you do? . . . I was just speaking to Mrs. Chinchilla and Mrs. Bigger. Oh, and there's Barbara Steppit over there! I wonder who that man is with her? He looks as if he might be an artist or something.

"Now here's a fascinating thing—this still life study. See Henry! . . . Well, I don't know just what it is—wait we're too close. Let's get back. Wait now till I get my glasses and get a little closer . . . Why it's oysters! That's what it is! . . . See, Henry? . . . Well, what do you think of it? . . . Why, Henry! . . . He says all he can say is that they look like Lynnhavens. Men are so literal minded.

Well, shall we move on—oh say here's something that's quite charming! Oh, Henry! See the little pink and lavender houses? . . . Crooked? Well, they're supposed to be crooked . . . Oh how do you do Mrs. Clymer? . . . Yes isn't it a powerfully painted picture. The technique is so succulent. And it has such architectural rhythm.

"Now I wonder where the Picasso is—oh, is THAT it? Oh, Henry! How do you do, Mrs. Sprink? . . . Yes it's a marvelous crowd. You never realize how many art lovers there are in this town—oh hello, Estelle! What a lovely orchid! Isn't this a powerfully painted picture? Such succulent technique! Oh, Henry, you and Harriet come here! Now Henry, here's the Picasso!

"Well what do you think of it? . . . Why, Henry! You ought to be ashamed! . . . Oh, he just said that if you'd give him a little pink paint he could do one just as good himself. Men are so literal minded.

"How do you, do Mrs. Sailem? . . . . Did you ever see such a crush? . . . You know, I think it's very significant that so many people would come out to see modern art. It really shows that we are progressing. . . . Oh Harriet, do look at this little study. Where's Henry? Did you ever see anything so utterly charming? . . . What's it called? . . . Oh, 'An Abstraction.' . . . What, Henry? . . . Why it's not supposed to be anything . . . No, you see it's an 'Abstraction.'

"How do you do Mrs. Mackerel . . . Yes simply everybody seems to be here. Well I do think that people right now—with things the way they are—realize that they're got to take a definite stand on the side of culture . . . Yes, I think it's our duty . . .

Well Harriet, I thought I'd lost you. Now where on earth is Henry? . . . Oh yes, over there by the door. Come here Henry! Oh say, let's go over where all those people are and see that nude. Oh Henry! Here's a nude! . . . No come here just a minute. I want to show you something. Oh how do you do Col. Perky . . . Yes, isn't it a powerfully painted picture? Did you ever see such marvelous flesh tones? . . . How do you do, Mrs. Pryor? . . . Yes it's a most interesting nude . . . I can't understand though why painters always choose such large women for their nudes. But I will say there's one comforting thing about it. You feel a little better yourself when you take off your girdle . . . Oh Henry! Come here I want you to see this nude before we go. Oh how do you do, Mrs. Primm! . . . Yes we're enjoying the nude. Now see Henry, see these two nudes on the bathing beach. Just took at those flesh tones. Isn't the pigmentation marvelous—What, Henry? . . . Yes, I believe that is a lighthouse in the back . . . What? . . . Why, Henry! Tck, tck, tck . . . Oh he just said he wondered if there wasn't some old sea dog in the lighthouse with a telescope. Isn't that awful? Men are so literal minded. I think Henry, we'd better go."

Skirted Day Frock Has Sensational Entry Into Paris

Paris (AP).—Skirted day frocks made a sensational entry into Paris fashions in a new dress-making collection.

Afternoon dresses in new summer showings featured embroidered white muslin petticoats, run through with old-fashioned hooks. These extravagantly wide skirts, in checked surahs and other silks, required this stiffened petticoat support.

Reaction to Spanish events was noted in a revival of boleros and lace mantillas. Day and evening boleros were a pronounced feature of the Robert Piguet collection. He also showed bellhop jackets in day suits.

White eyelets embroidered petticoats, some with hooks, were shown for day and evening wear accompanied by eyelets embroidered collars and collar-and-cuff details on dresses.

Let Good Music Inspire You

WHAT DO people get out of music? You see pictures of the New York Metropolitan Opera with tier upon tier of eager listeners. You hear of lines of people waiting to buy tickets for such great violinists as Yehudi Menuhin.

Do these music lovers have some special sense denied to others? Anyone with ears can appreciate fine music. And in these days of radio anyone can enjoy it—the thrilling new experiences it brings.

But so many people say "a symphony sounds confused—no tune." Yet they've often gaily hummed a part in an impromptu quartet—not realizing that basically even symphonies by Brahms and Beethoven are like quartets. Glorious, superb "quartets," it's true—but you can easily follow the instruments and the harmonies they create.

Discover the instruments themselves by listening to fine soloists. In the hands of a Pablo Casals the cello expresses every emotion. When Josef Hofmann plays a Chopin waltz on the piano he weaves a fragile beauty.

Garners Entertain in Honor of the Roosevelts At Dinner Marked by Homespun Texas Hospitality

Informality and Good Fun Characterizes Party That Keeps Host and Hostess Up Past Usual Bedtime; Gene Buck Is Master of Ceremonies

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

"GRADE A" TEXAS HOSPITALITY with a lively accent marked the dinner last evening at which the Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner entertained in honor of the President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

HOPE R. MILLER

Informality and good fun, interspersed with that homespun quality that has distinguished this event in other years, characterized the party, kept the host and hostess up away past their usual bedtime, and gave the Chief Executive and the First Lady one of the merriest evenings they have enjoyed this season.

With Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Authors and Composers and perpetual master of ceremonies for the Garner parties, in charge of the program and a flock of topflight entertainers down from New York, a show that was a show followed the dinner.

As in other years, the event took place at the Washington Hotel, where the Vice President and Mrs. Garner make their home. Both the Rose Room, where the dinner was served, and the sun parlor, where the program got under way, were transformed into a setting that might have been lifted out of the Southland. Palms and ferns were massed around the walls, and Spanish moss and smilax further heightened the Southern atmosphere.

The long table at which the 50 guests were seated was decorated with farleyense fern, Buddleia and "Better Times" roses brimming from five silver bowls and two vases.

Fred Waring's Band Featured on Program

While gay informality marked the gathering as a whole, the usual formal amenities were observed as the company was seated, strictly according to rank, and the dinner moved along from soup to coffee very much in the usual form. But afterward, when the company moved over to the sun parlor and settled down for the program, the spotlight shifted from the "big wigs" on the guest list to the professional entertainers, and from then on everybody followed the suggestion of the master of ceremonies, imagined they were "way down in Texas," and relaxed to enjoy the show.

Featuring Fred Waring and his famous Pennsylvanians, the program went on for exactly an hour and a half with the spotlight playing from time to time on such favorites as Tom Waring, Poley McClintock, Donna Dae, Stuart Churchill, the "twin trio," "two bees and a honey," Ray Sax, and Gordon Goodman, to mention only a few of the 60 singers and players who did their tricks and did them well.

Magician Stars As Entertainer

An additional feature of the show was a performance by John Mulholland, former president of the American Society of Magicians, who entertained the company with an act that brought forth a thunder of applause and had everybody begging for more.

On the list of guests, in addition to President and Mrs. Roosevelt, were the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, the United States Ambassador to China and Mrs. Nelson T. Johnson, the Secretary of Commerce, Harry Hopkins; the Governor of New Jersey and Mrs. A. Harry Moore, the Army chief of staff, Gen. Malin Craig, and Mrs. Craig; the chief of naval operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy; Senator and Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison, Senator Hattie W. Caraway, Representative Sam Rayburn, Representative Joseph W. Martin, Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton.

The company numbered 100. Easter lilies and forsythia decorated the drawing room and the dining room table was centered with a bowl of tulips and white snapdragons.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHETHER or not Representative Bruce Barton has lived up to his campaign promise to repeal a law a day, at least he and Mrs. Barton have managed to eliminate some of the deadly stiffness which characterizes the inevitable "at homes" which are such a part of life in the Capital. Usually at such affairs one's name is announced in booming tones before one trips down the receiving line, but yesterday at the Barton's party, the family retainer having failed to show up, it was the hostess herself who opened the door for her guests. Later Mr. Barton pinch-hitted for his wife and finally the door was just left standing open altogether.

DUDLEY HARMON

THE BARTONS are most hospitable, friendly people and looked as though they were really enjoying themselves yesterday. The usual flurry of white pasteboards with the corners carefully turned down was heaped on a table in the hall, but it did not reach monumental proportions.

Betsy Barton, the young and very pretty daughter of the hosts, assisted her parents. Her first article was published in a national magazine last summer, and she has just sold another one, on the subject of the pacifist movement in colleges.

Mr. Barton skipped out shortly after the guests left to attend a meeting of the Humming Birds, a convivial organization of some 25 Republican members of Congress which meets occasionally during the winter.

POURING TEA yesterday were Mrs. Charles McLaughlin, wearing a fur cape over her frock; Mrs. Robert Rich and Mrs. Charles R. Clayson, all wives of Representatives. There were many from the Congressional set present, including Representative Leonard W. Hall, who has taken the place of the late Robert Low Bacon, and Mrs. Hall and Representative and Mrs. Joseph J. O'Brien, also from New York.

Among others who stopped in to pay their respects were Mrs. Truxtun Beale, the Misses Randolph, Countess Roberti, Mrs. Ernest Draper, Angus Malcolm, Miss Barbara Crim, an attractive visitor from New York, and Mrs. Roger Hull and Mrs. John Shears, also from New York.

Mrs. Barton leaves today for a stay in Arizona.

And, oh, yes—the Barton apartment was filled with vases of daffodils yesterday, making for quite a spring-like atmosphere.

It does begin to look as though practically everyone was either confined to bed or had left town. Latest to depart is Lady Lewis, who has joined her mother, Mrs. Frank Noyes, and her sister, Mrs. Frances Noyes Hart, at the former's residence in Palm Beach. Mr. Noyes will join them later.

ODDS AND ENDS: Norman Armour, United States Ambassador to Chile, has arrived in town on leave and is staying at the Mayflower . . . Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell have returned from a trip to New York. . . . Among the dinner hosts last night was E. W. Pavenstedt.

Gay Parties Mark Pirates Den Opening

Dodd, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Suydam, Jacob Baker, Peggy Gibbons and scores of others.

Mr. and Mrs. Abner Drury entertained a party of 16 last night at the official opening of the den. Col. and Mrs. Hart Foster, accompanied by Commander and Mrs. C. B. Platt, dropped in later in the evening.

A gay party which was to have centered around Mary Steele and George Ross, son of Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, was canceled at the last moment—as the two young persons were married in Falls Church yesterday at noon!

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Bride, jr., entertained a party at their table, their guests including Mr. and Mrs. William Semmes, Ray Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gardiner, Miss Gertrude Good, Edward Castle and Jerry Sickler.

Mrs. Morgenthau Entertains Mrs. Roosevelt at Luncheon

First Lady Is Hostess to Several Hundred at White House Musicale; Her Schedule for Today Is Lighter

One of Mrs. Roosevelt's busiest days this season was chalked off the calendar yesterday when she was entertained at luncheon by Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., was hostess, herself, at a musicale at the White House in the afternoon, and then shared honors with her husband at the Vice President's dinner last evening. Preceding this schedule, she held her regular weekly press conference.

Twelve guests attended the luncheon given by Mrs. Morgenthau, whose parties always win honors for originality. Yesterday, the table decorations and the brief program tied up with them had "ohs" and "ahs" of delight rippling up one side the table and down the other.

A centerpiece, embellished with mimosa, sweet peas, roses and hyacinths was further set off with six china dolls, each dressed to represent the wife of a President. Martha Washington, Abigail Adams, Rachel Jackson, Dolly Madison, Mary Todd Lincoln and Julia Dent Grant were depicted in the miniature "company," and each was presented to Mrs. Roosevelt with a rhyme pointing out qualities which that particular First Lady of the past had in common with the current chatelaine of the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt entertained several hundred at the musicale, which is one in a series she is giving this season. Freda Gronowetter, cellist, and Charlotte Hamilton, contralto, presented a varied program. Accompanists were Michael Pollos and H. Maurice Jacquet.

The First Lady's schedule for today is light, the only engagement being to attend a youth meeting tonight at the Shoreham Hotel. She expects to arrive there at 8:30 o'clock.

Tomorrow she will visit the Self-Help Exchange in the morning. Friday evening she will be in New York to attend the annual Newspaper Women's ball. Before going, however, she will be present at the P. E. N. Club dinner.

Mrs. Roosevelt expects to return to Washington on Saturday, and on Sunday morning she will accompany the President to the Lincoln Memorial, where he will place a wreath in connection with the Lincoln Birthday celebration.

The President will entertain at a men's luncheon Monday in honor of Oswaldo Aranha, Brazil's foreign minister, while Mrs. Roosevelt is being feted at luncheon given by Mrs. Harry Woodring. Her next press conference will be at 11 a. m. Monday.

Miss Cheney Is Spelling Bee Victor

'Knicknack' Proves Undoing of Many at Columbian Contest

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Get out your old speller and brush up on your words, for spelling bees are about to become the vogue.

The Columbian Women had one yesterday with 25 on a side and "Webster's unabridged" for referee. The contest was conducted by Mrs. W. C. Ruediger, wife of the provost of George Washington University, who knew how it should be done because she was winner of a recent spelling match held in Atlantic City while she was on a visit there. She was assisted by Miss Margaret Pepper. An old Webster's blue back speller was the principal source of the words which they called out in rapid succession to the contestants.

Miss Harriet Cheney placed first, Miss Alice Hutchins Drake, second and Mrs. William Leishear, third. Mrs. Leishear stood alone on her side, spelling against both Miss Cheney and Miss Drake for a few words, but finally was spelled down.

"Knick knack" was one of the words which took down the spellers in one fell swoop. Some tried nic nac, others nick nack but the "k's" had it. So many went down on this word that it threatened to spoil the bee. It was ruled they should be allowed to stand again and try more words. Rhinoceros proved a difficult one and pyrotechnic and desiccate were among others which took their toll.

The meeting was one of the largest and jolliest the Columbian women have had this season and was held at Columbian House, followed by a tea. Miss Drake, Mrs. W. DeWitt Bennett and Mrs. Hulbert Bisselle poured.

Women graduates of last year's class at George Washington had been invited as guests and some of them participated in the contest. Two girls attending the university this year on scholarships given by the Columbian Women, Miss Marjorie Allen and Miss Ella Fraser, also were present and stood up until well toward the end of the spelling match.

A few, among others, who took part were Miss Janet McWilliam, a former school official; Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, wife of the dean of the law school; Mrs. Robert Griggs, wife of the head of the botany department; Mrs. Edgar Woolard, Mrs. George Jenkins, Mrs. W. Hay Yeager, Mrs. B. B. Mulford, Miss Arline Dufour, Miss Julia McCord, Miss Virginia Kinnard and Mrs. Robert Leighey.

Land Urges Better Training Facilities for U. S. Seamen

Tells Sponsors of Navy, Merchant Marine Educational Program Needs Improvement; Society Meeting Here

Emphasizing the importance of the merchant marine as the back log of the Navy, Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, yesterday urged better training facilities for its seamen. He commended the bravery and courage of the men and the safety of the ships in this country's merchant marine, and discussed briefly the commission's program for solving the training problem in an informal talk before the Society of Sponsors of the United States Navy. The society is having its annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

Admiral Land cited the value of the merchant marine not only in its primary function on the high seas but also in taking men off the streets and giving them jobs they enjoy in its building program and maintenance. With an educational program such as this country boasts, he deplored the neglect of adequate training facilities in this field.

Mrs. Russell Langdon, of New York, president of the society, presided at the business meeting which included reports by Mrs. Stanton R. Norman, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Larz Anderson, who heads the northeastern chapter, and Mrs. Land, who is chairman of the welfare committee. Serving with her on this committee, which passes on the scholarship awards, are Mrs. Herbert Howard and Mrs. Henry Williams, of Washington, and Mrs. Wilson Lee, of Silver Spring.

In the afternoon, the sponsors were entertained at tea at the home of Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations. Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Langdon received with the hostess. During the tea, Admiral Leahy also came in to greet the guests. There were 70 present.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Goldsborough Adams, Mrs. Albert Niblock and Mrs. Henry Williams.

In the evening Mrs. Land was hostess at a buffet supper for 40 guests.

Today the final business session will be followed by the annual luncheon at the Mayflower for members of the society and guests. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Edison and Senator David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, have been announced as the luncheon speakers. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, also will talk briefly.

Takoma Women Urge United Welfare Body

Ask Consolidation Of Board and Head Of County Aid

A resolution urging the consolidation of the office of the supervisor of county aid for Montgomery and the county welfare board was passed yesterday by the Takoma Park Women's Club at its February meeting in Town Hall. Action followed a report on the functions of the two agencies by Mrs. George Robertson, chairman of welfare. Mrs. Paul W. Burk, first vice president, presided at the business meeting in the absence of Mrs. Walter P. Harman, the president, who has gone to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for a week.

Alice Lee Jemison, a member of the Seneca tribe, was guest of honor and spoke before the club, describing Indian customs. Miss Jemison, who was here from New York, was accompanied by her mother.

She surprised the members of her audience with the statement that her tribe, before the American Revolution, had a democratic form of government, woman suffrage, a well balanced social system and was also in a league of nations. It was on the government of the Iroquois, she said, that the government of the United States was based.

Women, said Miss Jemison, play an important part in the life of most Indian tribes. Among the Senecas, inheritance and tribal descent is through the mother. Her brother, she explained, married a German and his children are considered white rather than Indian because their mother is a white woman. This is the rule today as in years past. The women select the chief of the tribe and the election procedure is much like that in the United States Government. The treaty of George Washington with the Iroquois Nation is the only Indian treaty this Government has kept, Miss Jemison asserted.

Mrs. Frederick Pratt, chairman of program, introduced Miss Jemison and music was provided by the quartet from the Choral Group. Members were Mrs. J. S. Clark, Mrs. E. L. Green, Mrs. A. G. Stone and Mrs. W. W. Swett. Mrs. Waldo Schmitt accompanied them.

EMMA J. WILSON

Retired Nurse Makes Career Of Studying U. S. Government

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Mrs. Emma Jane Wilson, the "baby" of this series to date since she is only a few months past the 70 mark, has entered the three-score-and-ten circle with her mind made up to learn all she can about government by first-hand observation.

A retired nurse whose interest was first focused upon Washington by the uproar that greeted President Wilson's appointment of Louis D. Brandeis to the Supreme Court, she came to the Capital a year ago from her Long Beach, Calif., home resolved to find out for herself just how the country is run. Instead of remaining for only a week or a month, she found herself a comfortable furnished room at 101 Fourth street northeast, near the Capitol, and is practically making a career of being an observer.

She'll have you understand, though, that she is no lobbyist. Although she has known Dr. Francis E. Townsend ever since he joined the group medical staff of the Belle Fourche (S. Dak.) Hospital when she was a young nurse there, she has "never raised my voice for old-age pensions."

In fact, she is aggressively opposed to all $200-a-month and $30-every-Thursday schemes.

"It's absurd," she says, "to demand $200 a month for people, many of whom never earned more than $75 a month in their lives. When men and women get old and neither they nor their families can provide for them, I think it is the Government's responsibility to give them essential needs but not to be ridiculously generous."

Ever since the Seventy-sixth Congress began Mrs. Wilson has been going to the Capitol or House and Senate office buildings every day, bending an attentive ear to floor debates and committee hearings. Bearing no axes to grind, she says she is interested in everything in general, nothing in particular.

"I came to Washington with big ideas about the vastness and importance of Congress," she says. "It was, I thought, the very last word in governmental machinery.

"Well, after a year, I am still hunting for a trace of kindliness on Capitol Hill. It seems so hard to find. There is so much bitterness and rancor among the members. I didn't expect it would be that way."

A distinguished looking, white-haired woman who speaks softly with a slight lisp, she was abashed by the outbursts of temper at the recent hearings on Hopkins and Murphy. She was glad when Frankfurter was confirmed, is perplexed by the political squabbling over the Roberts nomination.

Borah and Norris are her favorite Senators, though she has voted the Democratic ticket all her life, save when she cast her ballot for Hoover in 1928. To her, President Roosevelt is "the outstanding person in the world."

Mrs. Wilson says she is sad occasionally, especially when charges and counter-charges are flying about her ears, but she is never lonely or unhappy. The invective may make her wince but she is resolved to take it for the sake of a well-rounded education in the Washington scene.

Born in Ontario, Canada, in 1868, Mrs. Wilson spent her childhood in the wild South Dakota country of Wild Bill Hickok and Calamity Jane. She never saw the former but Calamity Jane she remembers as "a pretty good cook when she was sober."

For 35 years Mrs. Wilson worked as a registered nurse and before that she was a practical nurse seven years. She was in Long Beach when that city's most disastrous earthquake occurred six or seven years ago.

"I was caring for a private patient," she says, "and it kept me so busy trying to calm her down while pictures were falling off the walls and the furniture was sliding to and fro that I didn't have time to get excited myself."

Mrs. Wilson says she plans to stay here until Congress adjourns this summer, then she is going home to Long Beach to start making practical application, in the 1940 elections, of the knowledge she has picked up on the Hill.

$16,580,736 Paid Chest, Says Willett

Director, in Annual Report, Declares Fund Must Continue To Set 'Honest Goal'

Despite a "vast growth" in District welfare services in the past decade, the Community Chest must continue to set an "honest goal" to avoid a "debt of social costs . . . in days of lengthening shadows" to come, Herbert L. Willett, director, told over 800 Chest contributors in his annual report last night.

Following Willett's speech, the contributors, assembled in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, elected 110 of their number to the Chest board of trustees.

190,000 Subscribers

"During the past 10 years the number of contributors has risen from about 65,000 who subscribed for 1929 to 190,000 who subscribed for 1939," Willett declared, marking "a vast growth of civic interest and support for the services which are so essential to the welfare of this city."

"The people of Washington and suburban communities have pledged a total of $18,265,238 and have paid $16,580,736, or 90 per cent of the pledges," he said.

"While we are proud of the fact that in four of the past five years we have raised more money than in the previous year, we have not been content with that," asserted Willett. "We are still setting an honest goal that tells of the actual needs which the agencies should meet because unmet, they not only mean suffering and sorrow, but pile up a debt of social costs for future years."

Social Menace

Needy persons who remain uncared for are "sources of social contagion from which no one is exempt" and therefore constitute a social menace, Willett concluded.

H. L. Rust, Chest treasurer, reported that payment on pledges in 1938 was $1,763,048. The final deficit amounted to $87,262, he said.

Newman Sues C. of C. Official For Alienation, Asks $50,000

Theft of Wife's Love and Loss Of Baby Claimed; Sister of Mate Calls Charges 'Ridiculous'

A $50,000 alienation suit against a Chamber of Commerce official yesterday was projected into the court fight between Harry Scott Newman, Library of Congress employe, and his wife, Mrs. Evelyne Wilson Newman, over custody of their infant daughter.

In his suit, cited in District Court, Newman claimed that John J. Gibson, of Colmar Manor, assistant chief of the duplicating division, Chamber of Commerce, had broken up his home, and deprived him of the society of the child, 20-month-old Joan Carol.

Newman said last night the suit was part of his plan to recover custody of Joan Carol, now in the care of her mother, whose whereabouts are not known. Newman said he would never give up the fight. Mrs. Newman is a fugitive from Washington, where the District Court has held her in contempt of court for failure to surrender the child. She has sworn to live in permanent exile if returning here will mean giving up her baby.

Gibson said "the whole thing is a farce" when questioned about the suit. He said he had not determined what he would do, and added he had not yet sought legal advice.

Miss Ruth Wilson, sister of Mrs. Newman, said the suit was ridiculous and declared she would become a witness if it became necessary to protect the good name of her sister.

Blamed for Separation

The suit charged Gibson had "wrongfully, unlawfully, wickedly and intentionally" contrived to injure the plaintiff. It said Gibson had frequently visited Mrs. Newman at her home in Cottage City, Md., had driven her to and from work and taken her out to places of entertainment.

Newman claimed Gibson had attempted to induce Mrs. Newman to leave her husband, and had finally caused their separation in February, 1938.

Mrs. Newman last year sued for separate maintenance and lost custody of the child. The maintenance suit is still pending in District Court. Last month she was held in contempt of court for failure to surrender the child and ordered jailed by Justice Jennings Bailey.

Newman said yesterday he had received no news of the child. He explained he had offered to give up custody of the child if Mrs. Newman would return to live in Washington.

First Test Case Of Citizenship Law Filed Here

'Woman Without a Country' Is Wife of American Abroad

A plea for American citizenship, presented in District Court by a "woman without a country," yesterday became a test case for new citizenship legislation adopted last June. Justice Joseph W. Cox took the plea under advisement, and his decision will be the first court ruling on the legislation.

Mrs. Clara Pauline Gertrude Filipovich, a native of Germany and resident of French Guiana, and citizen of neither, filed her petition under the new law. The law opens citizenship rights to spouses of American citizens who are working abroad for an American firm engaged in development of foreign trade. Her husband, Stanley M. Filipovich, is an American citizen, employed as airport manager at Cayenne for Pan American Airways.

Mrs. Filipovich explained she lost her German citizenship when she married, and did not receive French citizenship.

District Sales Tax Indorsed By Randolph

Committee Chairman Addresses Columbia Heights Group, Hits Washington Slums

A District sales tax and Senator Overton's plan for Federal contribution to the cost of local government received unqualified indorsement from Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, last night.

In a speech before the Columbia Heights Citizens' Association meeting in the Mount Pleasant Congregation Church, Randolph declared:

"Thousands of visitors come to Washington every year, who, if there were a sales tax, would contribute to the District expenses and lighten the burden of those who live here 12 months of the year and year after year."

The tax also would enable Congressmen to participate more directly in District taxation, he continued.

The possibility of building a subway in Washington as a means of reducing traffic accidents was mentioned by Representative Randolph. "We must divert our traffic somewhere," he said, "and we can't put it in the sky."

Praises Mrs. Roosevelt

He spoke also of "disgraceful" living conditions in the poorer sections of Washington, praising Mrs. Roosevelt for her efforts to improve them. He called attention to his announcement that the House District Committee would inaugurate unofficial public forums to give residents an opportunity to raise and discuss specific questions.

Speaking of the number of aliens in America who have not expressed their intention of becoming citizens, which he estimated at over 4,000,000, he declared they were the "individuals who spread discord in labor and bring strikes into the land," and said he would introduce legislation in Congress in the next few days requiring the deportation within one year of all aliens who did not declare their intention of becoming citizens.

Resolution Demands Suffrage

Resolutions were passed at the meeting, declaring that no plan for District government would be complete without providing for suffrage; recommending that the Department of Traffic be placed under the Metropolitan Police, as suggested in the Griffenhagen report; urging Congress to make a survey of the amount of tax-exempt real estate in the District and the reasons for exemption in each, and reaffirming the association's stand that nonresident pupils in District public schools should pay a tuition fee.

The following committee was appointed to study the Griffenhagen report: Col. Luther H. Maddox, president of the association; George H. Brown, A. B. Carty, W. I. Stanton, Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, Miss Lillian Chenoweth and Dr. A. V. Smith.

A resolution also was passed requesting that street lights be lighted earlier at night and be kept on later in the morning, and requesting an increased appropriation for cleaning streets and enforcing the antilitter ordinances.

New members admitted at the meeting were Harvey C. Pierce, Miss Edith Swanton and Miss Julia C. French.

Pay Restoral To Mail Clerks May Aid 900

Reinstatement of five postal employes in a higher classification with back pay, ordered by District Court Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, may revive consideration of a plan to scrap railway postal terminals and turn over their duties to city postoffices, officials said last night.

This plan, it was learned, has already received attention as one of three possible administrative actions which postal officials can follow on the basis of Justice O'Donoghue's decisions.

Petitions Upheld

The other possibilities, officials suggested, are:

Reinstatement in Grade Five and payment of back salaries to more than 900 postal employes in railway terminals.

Mass transfers of this group to "on the road" assignments in the railway mail service.

Justice O'Donoghue yesterday signed decisions upholding the petitions of five railway terminal employes, which claimed they had been offered a choice of accepting demotion to Grade Four, with a pay cut from $2,450 to $2,300, or of accepting new assignments in the railway mail service away from their homes. They said they had taken the grade reductions but had continued with the same duties required in the higher grade.

Five Covered

Their petitions, filed against James A. Farley, as Postmaster General, asked restoration of grade and restoration of pay.

The five employes covered in the decision were Louis A. Ricci, New York City; Thilda B. Steenson, St. Paul, Minn.; Harold H. Crain, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Lillian V. Wood, New York City, and Garfield A. Pinn, of Washington.

Elevator Man Scratched

Robert Sessions, 21, of Arlington, Va., was treated at Emergency Hospital last night for scratches to his face, suffered when he became involved in an argument with an "unknown person" while operating an elevator in a downtown hotel.

Slaying Held Justified

He Hands Over $57

When two men approached him from behind, placed a hard steel object against his back and demanded his money, Harry Wilkerson, of 3542 Water street northwest, did not hesitate. He gave them $57. Wilkerson told police the robbery occurred last night at Eleventh street and Park road northwest.

Snatched Purse Is Recovered as Victims Cruise Street With Police and Identify Man

Thief Eludes Two Women in Footrace; Householders Give Alarm

A pocketbook that wouldn't stay snatched was returned to its owner last night half an hour after a man wrested it from two women at Central avenue and Brentwood road northeast and pulled away from them in a two-block foot race.

The women, Mrs. Elizabeth Lawrence and Mrs. Anna Granstaff, both of 2915 Mills avenue northeast, were coming home from the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier, Md., when a man who had followed them some distance grabbed Mrs. Lawrence's handbag, which contained $3.

Screaming, the women gave chase until the thug disappeared up an alley. Twelfth Precinct Detective J. E. Ennis, summoned by householders who heard the outcry, cruised in a squad car with the women until Mrs. Lawrence identified a sidewalk stroller as the pocketbook snatcher.

Arrested with the handbag in his possession, the man will be placed in a police line-up tomorrow for possible connection with other holdups in the Northeast area.

18 WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1939 X*

COLONIALS SWAMP WESTERN RESERVE

Show Power In Winning 62-46 Game

Bob Faris Tallies 16 Points to Take D. C. Individual Scoring Lead

By Jack Munhall.

Rolling up points with the rapidity and accuracy of an adding machine, George Washington's high-powered basketball forces ran roughshod over strong Western Reserve at Tech gym last night to record a 62-46 victory, their third straight, and seventh in 11 games this season.

The triumph, fashioned to the unrestrained glee of about 1,200 fans, gave the Colonials the lead over Georgetown and Maryland in the hot race for the college District championship, while Capt. Bob Faris, spraying the backboard with 16 points, took over the individual point-scoring honors for the city, both in total and average. Faris now has 132 for an average of slightly more than 13 a game, while Maryland's George DeWitt has 128 for 13 contests.

Western Reserve, featuring in its center and national decathlon champion, Joe Scott, a deadly shot and brilliant all-around courtman, brought in a surprisingly able quintet, well coached, unusually tall and very speedy, but the little Cleveland Engineering School never had a chance with the eagle-eyed Colonials.

Set Dizzy Pace

The game produced the fastest action seen in the college ranks and also the highest combined point total made in any major high school or college contest here this season. During the first half, especially, field goals followed field goals so quickly that it was difficult to tabulate the score. The pace slowed down somewhat midway of the second half when George Washington's second team held forth and Western Reserve's players were dog-tired from chasing the Colonial regulars during the opening period.

Western Reserve trailed throughout the game, with the exception of the first minute of play when Scott and John Blair, 6-foot 3½-inch guard, tossed in a field goal and a foul to give the Midwesterners a 3-2 lead.

But after that it was all George Washington as Faris, with the help of George Garber, who made 15 points, and "Reds" Auerbach, who continued his fine play with 10, threw everything into the basket except the referee and Faris' false teeth. And there remains a controversy as to whether handsome Robert's store-bought molars didn't ring up a point or two for the Colonials. Faris lost two of his dental decorations in the Toledo game last month and was proudly sporting two false ones until sometime in the second half last night. If they are found, a small reward awaits the returner.

At half the scoreboard showed, G. W. 40, Western Reserve 20. And so the uneven fray moved into the second half. Western Reserve was never able to reduce the deficit to less than 20 points until with 6 minutes to play, Coach Reinhart inserted his second team, player by player. When the reserves took over, G. W. was in the van, 50-28, and although the visitors outscored the Colonials, 18 to 12 they found the Colonials' lead far to great to overcome. It was their seventh loss against eight victories this season.

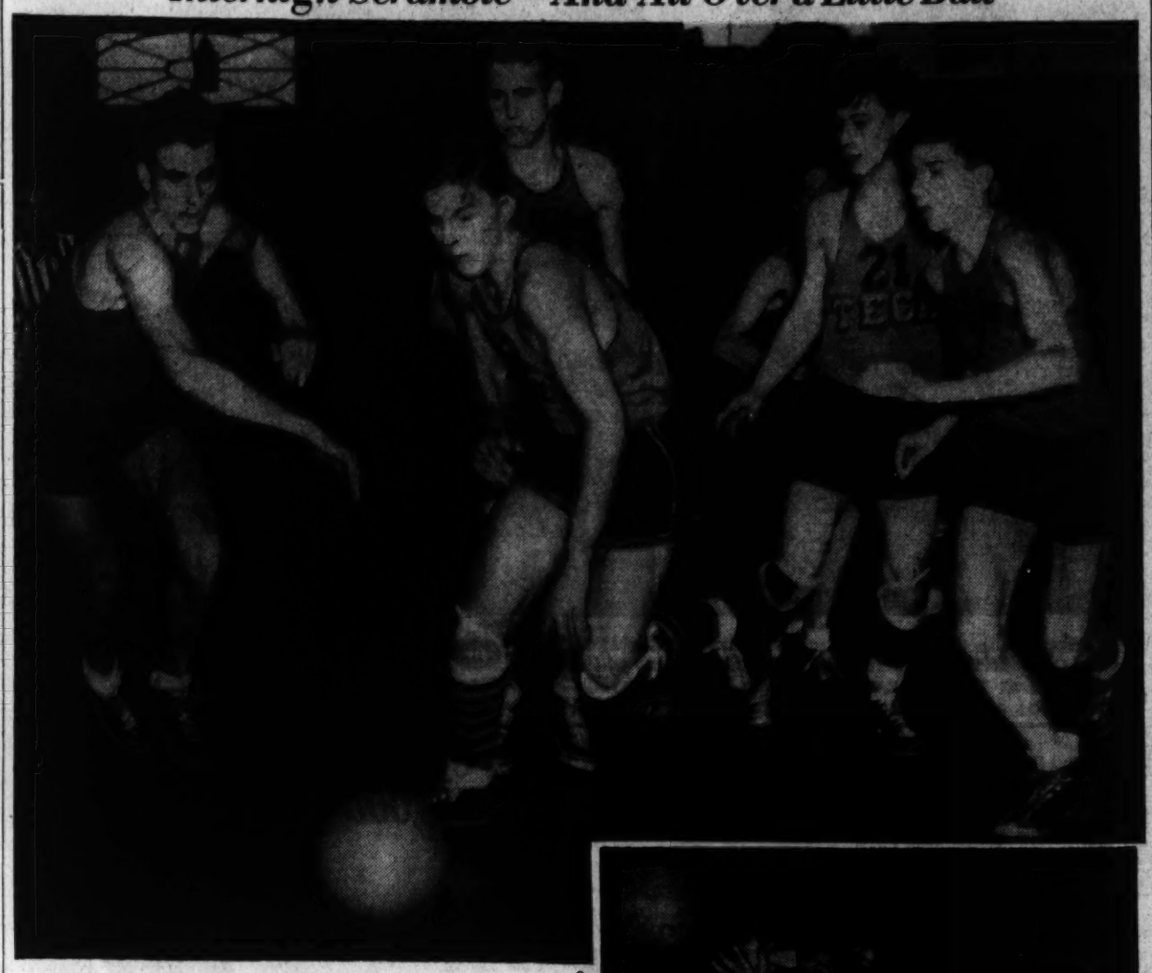
Interhigh Scramble—And All Over a Little Ball



Riders Upset Central; Tech Beats Anacostia

West Scores All of Roosevelt Points In Last Period; McKinley Wins, 19-15

By Bill Burnett.

With George West doing all the scoring in the final period, Roosevelt High turned back the power threat of Central yesterday on the Rider court, 21-16, after the score had been tied three times in the last half. A capacity audience witnessed the exciting finale to an interhigh doubleheader, the first half of which Tech took from Anacostia, 19-15, with a rally in the last period.

Going into the final session of its game, Roosevelt was in possession of a 12-10 lead that vanished almost instantly with the one-handed circus shot of Archie Panago, Central veteran. West, an All-High selection last year, again took the lead for his team with a snowbird. He followed it some minutes later with a neat set shot, paused while a Mount Pleasant substitute, Apostolakos, hit the ring on a dead run, and then closed out all scoring with a foul throw allowed on Dick Farr's pushing.

Farr Looks Good

Hymie Perlo, star of the Rider aggregation, was once again in the line-up after sitting out Roosevelt's last engagement. Though Ken Quigley, Central's regular pivot man, graduated last week, his place was ably filled by Farr, a holdover from last year who only recently became scholastically eligible.

The Roosevelt-Central clash began slowly, neither team being able to tally a field goal until the initial period was almost gone. With Central ahead by a 3-2 margin, Perlo scored the only double-pointer of the game with less than a minute left to play. By halftime, Roosevelt had pulled away to a 7-4 lead, the second session being featured by the missed set-up of Harry Martin.

The second half was a toddling infant when Martin redeemed himself with a pivot goal. Central was unable to catch up, however, until the third period was almost gone, and then Farr turned the trick with a free throw.

With the last period spree, West's 10 points took scoring honors.

G.U. Frosh Win 41-40 Thriller From Colonials

Jimmy Giebel's follow basket with ten seconds to play last night gave Georgetown Frosh a thrilling 41-to-40 victory over George Washington's yearlings at Tech gym.

Giebel's shot, a looping one-handed affair, nullified a splendid rally which the Little Colonials had staged to overcome a 36-to-28 fourth-period deficit and take a 40-to-39 lead.

The game was highly reminiscent of the 45-to-43 victory Georgetown scored over G. W. in their first meeting this season. This second victory gave Georgetown the season's series, 2 to 0, and prevented the necessity of a third deciding contest.

The Georgetown Frosh led all the way and appeared certain to win easily until midway in the fourth quarter, when Matt Zumic and Paul Brieff engineered an attack which carried G. W. to the van.

With the Hoyas holding an advantage of 36 to 28, Brieff flipped in a long basket which started a brisk rally.

MacPhail Sees National Race As Seven Big 'Ifs' and Phils

Cubs Favorites Only Because They Won in '38, Says Dodger Boss

By the United Press.

New York, Feb. 7.—Laughing Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn Dodgers' mouthpiece and master mind, analyzed the National League pennant race today and came to the conclusion it was very much like the fellow who said if he had some ham he'd have some bam and eggs if he had some eggs.

"As the clubs get ready to go South it looks to me like the National League is made up of seven great big ifs and the Phillies," said MacPhail. "I can make a good case for any one of the seven clubs except the Phillies. That is, provided all their ifs turn out the right way. The Phillies, as usual, are just doing the best they can."

MacPhail said he considered the Chicago Cubs the favorites only because they won the pennant last year and not because he believed that they were any stronger than several other clubs.

Gulfstream Park Owner Promises Quick Reopening

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 7.—Horsemen whiled away the hours swapping yarns in the Gulfstream Park grandstand today as young Jack Horning sought capital with which to reopen the $1,400,000 racetrack that closed yesterday after a four-day run.

Horning reported progress and reiterated his determination to reopen within a few days but gave no details of his activity. The only other official announcement was a report by Managing Director John F. Letendre that the track showed a $6,900 profit.

The immediate cause of the shutdown was withdrawal of the pari-mutuel bankroll guarantee, understood to be $45,000, but the difficulty apparently had become more serious than that detail. The pressing need was for considerable additional financial backing to insure operation of the track for the rest of its allotted 40 days. The Gulfstream publicity office said a dozen persons and concerns had offered to guarantee the mutuel money.

Babe Ruth to Teach At Doan Baseball School

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Babe Ruth, after several weeks dickering, had signed as an instructor on the faculty of the Ray L. Doan School of Baseball, Doan announced tonight.

Doan said other instructors in his "college," which he moved here from Hot Springs, Ark., would include Dizzy Dean, Burleigh Grimes, Gabby Street, Dickie Kerr, Johnny Mostil and "Red" Ormsby.

Shoremen College Court Star Nears 1,000 Point Mark

Chestertown, Md., Feb. 7 (AP).—Alex (Goop) Zebrowski, towering center on Washington College's crack basketball team, is winding up his collegiate court career this season with hopes of sending his four-year scoring record past the 1,000-point mark.

As the Washington team went to Chester, Pa., tonight to meet Pennsylvania Military College, Zebrowski's points scored to date totaled 894, leaving him 106 to go to hit 1,000.

John Hettche Named Michigan Boxing Head

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 7 (U.P.).—Gov. Frank Fitzgerald appointed John Hettche, a Detroit automobile dealer, Michigan boxing commissioner today after receiving the resignation of Frank MacDonell.

MacDonell, angered by reports that the Governor had said his action was "for the good of boxing in Michigan," attempted to withdraw his resignation, but Fitzgerald refused to consider such a move.

Franklin Stops Risko

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Walter Franklin, young New York middleweight, scored the fifteenth knockout of his brief professional career tonight when he stopped Eddie (Babe) Risko, of Syracuse, N. Y., former middleweight champion, in 49 seconds of the sixth round of their eight-round bout at the Coliseum. It was Franklin's nineteenth straight victory. He weighed 161; Risko, 164¼.

Louis-Roper To Meet in Los Angeles

Pair Sign for 10-Round Title Bout On April 24

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 7.—Promoter Tom Gallery, of Los Angeles, announced tonight Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will meet Jack Roper in a 10-round title bout here in April under the joint promotion of himself and Mike Jacobs, of New York.

Gallery declared he had obtained Jacobs' approval for the match. Jacobs has first call on the champion's ring services.

Monday, April 24, was announced as the tentative date but Gallery said it might be held earlier.

Roper, rated here the most dangerous heavyweight in the business, although over 35, relaunched a serious fighting campaign more than a year ago and his most recent victims include Patsy Perroni, Jorge Bresica and Eddie Simms, with a 1-round knockout over Bob Nestell in his last appearance.

Roper, who claims West Virginia as his home State, is billed to meet Junior Munsell, of Oklahoma, Friday at Hollywood Stadium.

Louis has fought in Los Angeles but once. He knocked out Lee Ramage in 1935 before he became the titleholder.

Roper Kayoed Mader In Bout at Turner's

Jack Roper knocked out Eddie Mader at Turner's Arena last winter in the fourth of a scheduled ten-round bout, hitting his opponent so hard Mader's ankle was broken. He naturally is a southpaw, but boxes in orthodox fashion, and thus packs added power in a left jab. Despite his age, he still is regarded as one of the game's most durable and dangerous trial horses.

Roper is the brother of Capt. Bob Roper, who served in the A. E. F. and was well known in professional rings in the early 1920's, and also a brother of Jack Roper. All were heavyweights. Roper works as an extra on movie lots when not fighting. He invaded the East briefly last year, but returned West after knocking out Mader, which bout followed his ten-round defeat at the hands of Nathan Mann.

Card Line-up Revamped for V.P.I. Match

Eddie LaFond, Catholic University coach, shuffled his cards yesterday in a move to have them at peak strength for Saturday night's invasion by Virginia Poly. The Gobblers are bringing the strongest team, perhaps, Catholic will face over the remainder of the season, and the District aggregation can consider it a feather in its collective cap if it wins.

LaFond will use Gerry Strang, a hard-hitting middleweight, in the lightweight class, dropping down Co-Captain Fred Stand to the 165-pound berth. The move will pit Strang against hard-punching Dave Pitts, and Stant against a grammar school rival, Frank Oliver. The Cardinal coach, however, figures Strang is better qualified to punch it out with Pitts, while Stant may outbox his opponent.

Jay Turner will hold forth in the heavyweight class, which may be the deciding bout, so evenly matched are the teams.

Meanwhile, Maryland, which invades North Carolina this week-end, will present the same line-up against the Tarheels that held Virginia to a 4-4 stalemate last week. The squad got back in full stride yesterday after taking it easy Monday, and will work at top speed today and tomorrow. Nate Askin's right arm, which gave him trouble last week, is responding to treatment, and the Baltimore welterweight should be at his best for this match.

Mrs. Luce Heads Beaver Dam Group

George P. Sullivan, president of Beaver Dam Country Club, yesterday appointed Mrs. George P. Luce chairman of the women's golf committee at the club. Twelve other new committee heads were announced, along with the reappointment of Mrs. C. E. Purdy to the post of committee secretary and Mrs. N. J. Waldron to the treasurer's position.

Mrs. Richard Murphy, besides being given the vice chairmanship of the committee, was appointed head of the tournament committee, and Mrs. R. Carl Mitchell was elected to head the rules committee as well as act as one of the team captains for inter-club play.

The other team captain will be Mrs. A. W. Tucker. The important post of chairman of the ways and means committee was given to Mrs. G. E. Mattison.

Following are the other chairmen and their committees: Mrs. Charles Range, handicap chairman; Mrs. William Henderson, prize chairman; Mrs. Albert Rass, hospitality chairman; Mrs. G. E. McGowan, District tournament representative; Mrs. William Kerr, ringer tournament chairman, and Mrs. Malcolm Deem, tournament records chairman.

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

By Lewis F. Atchison.

"What's wrong with boxing in the District, or has anybody in the crowd change for a ten?" This is another in a series of articles everybody seems to be writing for their own diversion, and we mean everybody. Nobody wants boxing to improve, they're having too much fun writing letters to the editor.

ATCHISON.

Why just the other day the editor stormed in with enough letters to paper a 12-room house (two baths and maid's quarters in the attic).

"Bill," he says (nobody ever calls anybody by their right name on our paper—it's that democratic), "George," he says, "we've got to do something about this fight situation, people are writing to me about it and I've got my hands full of Spaniards, Italians, Frenchmen and whatnot in this Spanish argument."

"Who's promoting that one?" we asked, a bit wearily.

"Nobody knows, exactly, but that's beside the point. The point is, we've got to do something about the fight situation right here in our own city. What do you suggest?"

"Lift the embargo—let 'em bring in men and arm 'em."

"This is no time for horseplay," he said testily, waving enough letters to paper a 12-room house (or, you can have a recreation room in the basement and built-in garage if your maid lives at home).

"I'm not jesting. Let 'em bring in some fighters, make 'em fight, and everybody will be happy."

"They have fighters already."

"They're parading under false pretenses. There hasn't been a fighter set foot in the arena since Jack Dempsey refereed that last time."

"Well, why don't you write something to that effect and urge the promoter to import some fighters? I want to get these people off my hands. We've momentous civic and diplomatic problems to consider, and I can't be filling up our letters to the editor column with these." And he waved the papers (that open fireplace really sets off the living room, don't you think?) in our face again.

"Why don't you take over the Washington situation," we suggested, "and give us the Spanish fight? There seems to be more civic interest in the decline of boxing heresabouts than the rise of Spanish fascism. Anyway, the promoter has so many people giving him advice and telling him how to run our business I can't even get in to see him any more."

"Is that so?"

"Listen, he's been bombarded with ideas from all sides. They want him to release toy balloons with passes attached; they want him to bring in Joe Louis; they want him to match Goldie Ahearn in a return bout with Al Foreman, and some of them even want a free lunch with the passes."

"Surely, Henry, you must be jesting."

"Well, if you'll stop threatening me with those weighty documents in your hand, let me point out that it has been suggested we need a new arena here."

"Well, they'll build one if you'll advance the money—about $50,000."

"I'm a little short today—income tax and all that sort of thing."

"Then, somebody said the lights (and the lights in this house are knockouts, friend) were detracting from the interest—and they took out the lights."

"And still interest waned?"

"Exactly, and it's still waning. They said the place needed a few heavyweights for decorative purposes, said we hadn't seen a heavyweight since Marty Gallagher hung up the gloves—even a nonfighting heavy."

"Is that true?"

"Sad. Sad, indeed."

"Mike Jacobs again, I presume."

"Absolutely correct again. Why, John Henry Lewis is going to Europe to fight because Jacobs won't turn Mello Bettina loose against him."

"Can't something be done about Jacobs? Can't we get some concerted action to restore the heavyweight and light-heavyweight circulation to normal?"

(Friend, this goes on and on for pages. But seriously, how about a house? Now's the time to buy. Prices are going up this spring. And the paper. That reminds me . . . a sheet of paper . . . 12-room house . . . letter to Jacobs.)

Snead Shoots 65; New Putter Helps; Rejoins Pros' Tour

SNEAD

The Slammer, who rated a top money maker among the golfing pros of 1938, will take off Saturday for the winter circuit once more, joining the gang at New Orleans.

"I'm getting restless and want to get back in the game," said Sam, "besides I've got to try for some purses. This layoff has knocked a big hole in my earning average. Those income tax inspectors'll get to hold off awhile.

Sam caught a bad cold while on the rounds with the pros a month ago and lost 24 pounds. Withdrawing from winter golf, he came home to rest up. He played only three rounds in the month.

He looks better and for a week has been aching to get back. Dr. I. T. Hornsbarger, Hot Springs, Va., physician, and Freddie Martin, the White Sulphur pro, persuaded Sam to hold off a while.

Miss Bauer, who won medal honors yesterday, will meet Mrs. H. F. Mack, of Easton, Pa., in the second round tomorrow. Mrs. Mack defeated Mrs. Charles Harbaugh, of Cleveland, Ohio, 3 and 2.

Daredevil's Car Careens On Soft Road, Drops 15 Feet Into Water

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Feb. 7.—William C. (Wild Bill) Cummings, 32-year-old daredevil who has fought his way out of many "tight spots" while racing automobiles and motorcycles and piloting airplanes, was engaged tonight in his greatest battle—for his life.

The sheer grit and nerve that enabled "Wild Bill" to go to the top in the automobile racing game and win the 500-mile classic here in 1934 were keeping him alive. Dr. E. V. Hahn said Cummings' condition was "critical."

"Wild Bill," as everyone calls him around here, avoided many serious smashups on race tracks by his skillful, oftentimes sensational, driving. But last night, as he drove alone from the city southeast on State Road 29 toward his suburban home, his passenger automobile careened on soft shoulders, muddy from rain.

Georgetown Meets Terps Tonight for Court Lead

Maryland's Spurt Makes Tilt Toss-up

Old Liners Would Avenge '38 Loss At Home Tonight

By Jack Munhall.

The District collegiate basketball leader will be determined, temporarily at least, tonight when rejuvenated Georgetown journeys to College Park to do battle with surprisingly strong Maryland in what looms as the closest game of their modern rivalry.

Time was earlier this season when the Terps were conceded small chance of avenging last year's 57-39 rout by the Hoyas and at the same time evening their traditional series at two victories each, but in light of Georgetown's recent slump and its own amazing improvement, Maryland will rule no worse than even money against Elmer Ripley's inconsistent quintet.

Among the many and varied honors of pride and prestige that will be at stake in this the fourth annual classic between the keen local rivals is Maryland's newly acquired top position among the District fives, a distinction it shares with Georgetown after quietly rising from last place as the Hoyas and Colonials sloughed off their fast early pace.

Terrapins Are Threat

Spurred by six straight victories which practically clinched a place in the Southern Conference championship tournament, Maryland now is firmly established as a threat to both Georgetown and George Washington which were supposed to wage a two-team race for the District title.

Including th e result of the G. W.-Western Reserve game following are the standing of the three rivals in the hot championship race:

Maryland	8	5	511	473
Georgetown	8	5	483	442
George Washington	7	4	525	489

So it can easily be seen that the winner of tonight's game will take a clear lead which it should maintain at least until George Washington is met. The Hoyas meet the Colonials March 8, and Maryland and G. W. play February 22.

Another of the sidelights so prominently cast in this Georgetown-Maryland classic is the individual scoring duel which should develop between the Terps' Capt. George Knepley and George DeWitt and Johnny Schmitt and Capt. Joe Murphy, of Georgetown.

Woodward Loses, 25-17, To St. Albans

St. Albans Prep won its fourth basketball game against four losses yesterday by leading all the way to defeat Woodward Prep, 25-17, in the Saints' gym.

With Hannan, Alexander and Hare each scoring seven points, St. Albans had a 9-4 advantage at the half and won without difficulty despite the absence of its Capt. Pete Slingluff who was sick.

St. Albans will play its first game of the season away from home Friday, meeting Rockville in an effort to avenge a 23-19 setback received last month by the suburban team.

Arlington County Boys Turn to Boxing

Central High Boasts Strong Track Squad

If its list of veterans is any worthy indication, Central High will again capture the interhigh track crown it won easily last year. Eight of the best cindermen who ran up a total of 70 points in the public high track meet are back in school and preparing for the four major meets on the Mount Pleasant schedule.

PEARCE

The debut of this year's team was made last month in the Boys Club of Washington sports carnival, in which it turned in several first places. The next meet is Catholic University's annual games, slated for March 4. The Centralites will participate in the Fifth Regiment Games in Baltimore on March 11, and the Southern Conference meet in Chapel Hill, N. C.

Oustanding contender for schoolboy pole vault honors will be Dave Baxter, holdover from last year. Baxter has been pacing Central's tank team in the fancy diving division, but has had to retire from the team because of an aggravated sinus infection. His work with the track team may make a wide difference in the field events. Bill Edgerton, a cage star who was forced to leave that sport because of a broken hand, will return to duties in the 440. All the middle distance runners will be back under the guidance of Coach Hardy Pearce—Albert Hayden and Griff Seldon. Jim Porter, plunging fullback from the football team, will take part in the 220-yard dash.

The best dash man to return is Jim Zuppa. He and Erwin Ornstein are a formidable pair of speedsters on anybody's track team. Roy Bruce will carry Central's hopes for first places in the mile run, and Johnny Daws is the outstanding high jumper held over from 1938.

Gov't. 'Y' League 2d Half Begins

Second-half play in the Government-Y. M. C. A. Basketball League gets under way tonight with ten teams scheduled to see action on both Central "Y" courts.

Library of Congress and Farm Credit Administration open hostilities at 7:10 o'clock, while Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce meets National Archives and Bureau of Standards faces G. A. O. at 8:20. The Social Security Board, Public Health Service and State Department-Patent Office tilts slated for 9:30 complete the card.

Bureau of Standards took first-half honors by winning all nine of their games, while Library of Congress, Patent Office and Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce deadlocked for second place with seven wins and two losses each. Second-half play is slated to end March 30.

Wilson Bows To St. John's Five, 27-18

St. John's continued its rush toward a second straight scholastic basketball championship yesterday by defeating Wilson, 27-18, at St. John's for its second victory of the season over the Presidents and its eleventh in 12 games.

The Cadets, their attack pretty evenly distributed among Joe Gallagher, Frank Cady and Martin Hunt, led all the way to easily defeat the inter-high team which extended it to the utmost before losing by one point in their previous meeting at Wilson.

St. John's led only 5-2 at the end of the first period and 7-2 at half but opened up with a flurry of baskets at the beginning of the third quarter to pile up a prohibitive margin.

Charles (Chuck) Findley, Wilson center who is leading the interhigh series scorers, paced the losers with three baskets. Gallagher, Hunt and Cady tallied 7, 6 and 5 points, respectively, for St. John's, which used its whole varsity squad in the game.

Handball Play For A.A.U. Title In Semifinals

Brevity was the keynote of second round play in the D. C. A. A. U. handball tourney on the Central "Y" courts last night, with four doubles combines making their way into the semifinal bracket without the loss of a single game.

Jack Schwartz and Paul Pearlman, the District's top ranking team, set the example by romping to an easy 21-8, 21-1 victory over the F. Masterson-H. Hernly pair. George Wendlandt and Gustave Goldstein encountered a surprising lack of opposition in turning back the J. Payne-H. Berman combine, 21-9, 21-5.

Singles play continues tonight with the following matches comprising the card: Jack Schwartz vs. John Payne; Charles Engelhardt vs. George Wendlandt; Walter Engelhardt vs. Charles Walden, and Albert Levin vs. Gustave Goldstein.

Mt. Rainiers' Foes Fail to Get Field Goal

Training School Five Makes Only Fouls in Losing by 36-5 Count

An unusual basketball game was won yesterday by Mount Rainier High, 36-5, over the quintet of National Training School for Boys. All of the loser's five points were tallied on foul shots.

At the start of the game at the Mounts' gym there was every indication that Training School was in for bad breaks. Its attempted field goals either bounced around the ring and out, or failed to hit the backboard. Mount Rainier led, 8-1, at the first quarter. National had its highest scoring period in the second, when McNalley, Scripps and Winedrenner chalked up foul throws for a 3-point total. Mount Rainier increased its lead to 17-4 at the half.

Only once during the last half of the game did a ball drop through the Nationals' goal. Scripps rang up his second foul shot to take scoring honors for the losers.

Jack Glynn was the high scorer of the game with 9 points, though all but one of the numerous reserves used by Mount Rainier had a hand in the scoring.

Panago paced the scoring attack of Central, turning in two field goals and a pair of free tosses for six points. Neither team was able to sink a respectable percentage of its foul chances, accounting for the low score.

Serious Contender

Tech moved into serious contention for one of the four places in the interhigh playoff with its triumph over the hard-working Anacostians, and by the same token, Anacostia dropped out of the fight. Its four straight defeats make it virtually impossible for it to earn one of the coveted spots in its first year in the race.

Every indication as the game began pointed to a victory for the slim youth from the "flats." Anacostia held its speedy opponent to a scant 3 points in the opening period while Johnny Placos and Jack Koontz rang up 10. It continued its hot pace in the second period, holding a 12-7 advantage at intermission.

Gradually Tech found the range in the third period, Buddy Edwards, Moe Tannebaum and Eli Blank bringing the total up even, 14-14, for the final period. Tannebaum dropped a two-pointer as the qurater opened, and after the teams had missed six foul throws in succession, Vic De Leon took the game out of the reach of the tiny invaders. Bob Gordon tallied the only point in the final quarter for Anacostia, a charity toss allowed on Tannebaum.

Marshall Dellinger, frail-looking forward of the winners, earned a draw for scoring honors with Placos, of Anacostia, when he dropped three neat pot shots in the first half. Placos' 6 points came with two field efforts and as many foul shots.

Pro League Meets

Bob McDonald, general manager of Heurich Brewers, entrained for New York late yesterday afternoon to attend an important American Basketball League meeting in New York last night.

The proposed shifting of several American League games and other matters were to be discussed.

Kelley to Rebuild Eastern Track Team

Hart Excuses Veteran Mentor From Duties As Gym Instructor

In an effort to return its track team to the top of the interhigh heap, Eastern will release Mike Kelley, track coach, from most of his duties as drill instructor at gym classes so that he may concentrate his abilities on track, it was announced yesterday by Principal Charles Hart.

Many of Kelley's duties in the gymnasium will be taken over by Ralph Watt, science department teacher for the past few years. It was Kelley who led Eastern cinder representatives to first place in interhigh track competition for three successive years, beginning in 1928. Since then, the team has placed second five times, third once, and last year it fell off to a poor fifth. Officials anticipate a return to the old order with Kelley bending all his efforts toward track.

With Artie Boyd, football coach, having transferred to Central to fill the shoes of Bill Foley, veteran track mentor at that school, Principal Hart said that present plans were for Kelley to take over the 1939 edition of Eastern's football team.

One other shift has been made on Eastern's coaching staff. Though Charles "Chief" Guyon will remain in the baseball coaching position, he will be ably assisted this year by Walter Beall, former major league pitcher for Washington and the New York Yankees. The additional instructor makes it possible for the Lincoln Park institution to continue its dominance of interhigh baseball circles. In the last 14 years, Eastern has taken 11 public school titles with its baseball teams.

In his first year as guide of the basketball team at Eastern, John MacBride, former Indiana coach, has been so successful that he will be retained for another year. The team has been undefeated in schoolboy ranks to date, and its few losses outside the regular series were to such powerful fives as Navy Plebes, Georgetown Frosh, and George Washington High, of Alexandria.

Weinberg Breaks Two of Own Records in League Bowling

Meyer Weinberg, star of the Carstairs team of the Distributors League, broke two of his own league season records at Lucky Strike last night as his team won the odd game from District, Weinberg boosted his high game record from 152 to 155 and raised his high set record from 388 to 393. Joe Gottlieb was high for the losers with a game of 141 and a set of 377.

Columbia Heights League

League leading Arcadia defeated second place Chaconas Market in two games, bringing its edge in the standings to two full games. Hess Coal Co., in third place, strengthened its chances to upset the leaders later on with a three-game triumph over Daly Food Co. The 387 set of Joe Dimisa, Jacobs Transfer star, helped the team to an odd game victory over Lucky Five.

Buddy Seal, of Hessick, tumbled 169 pins for high single game, and Joe Freschi's 420 set was high. Hessick's team total was 643, the best of the night, and its 1,820 team set stole honors in that department.

Patent Office

Larry Goodridge set a league game and set record in the Patent Office League at Rendezvous, his 174 turning the trick for single games and helping out in a 435 set, which was the best ever turned in. The stellar performance also enabled Goodridge's team, Howe, to earn a second place tie in the league with three straight games over Eastman.

Ed Murray, Rensen roller, was high game and set scorer for his team as it swept three games from Fulton. He had a 156 game and 389 set. Marconi and Deforest swept its match with Fulton and Whitney, and Edison and Franklin was a 2-to-1 victor over Bell and McCormick.

Postoffice Dept. League

With a two-game victory over Railway Mail, Third Assistants moved back into the league lead at Columbia Alleys. Postal Savings captured two games from Postmasters, Postoffice Service took two from Equipment and Supply, and Chief Inspectors took all three from Second Assistants. Fourth Assistants closed out the evening's activity by taking two from Money Orders. The 1533 team set of Postal Savings was high for the night, and Postoffice Service accounted for the high team game, 535. Ed Gerb took individual set honors with 350, and Walter Anawalt, of Postoffice Service, registered high game, 138.

American League

At Silver Spring, Hal Simmers' 374 set helped to gain a two-game victory for Valley Forge Beer over Stewart Brothers. The league-leading Silver Spring Market tightened its grip on the top rung with three games over Grotto Grill. Jack Wolstenholm was high for the market team with 259.

Bert Lynn, topping a total of 391 pins, paced the Silver Spring Hotel to an odd-game victory over Marcey Motors, and Liberty Wall Paper took two from Shepherd Park Restaurant, Noble Viers' 409 set being mainly responsible. The latter score was high for the night.

Lutheran Church League—

Edna Perry, rolling for St. Paul, paced the Lutheran individual scorers at Arcade with a 119 game. Margaret Miller, of Trinity No. 1, turned in the best individual set, 316, helping her team to high team game, 505, and high team set, 1,440.

Lutheran Church League—

Game and set honors were fairly evenly distributed between the teams of the league. Denier, of St. Matthews rolled a 139 game for individual game honors and Perryman, of Keller Memorial, took set honors with 389, St. Paul's 582 game was high for the teams and Atonement's 1,629 captured team set honors.

PWA League

Pat Collins, of Accounts, rolled high individual game, 139, in the P. W. A. League at the Ice Palace Alleys. Collins' 394 also was good for high individual set. Classification took high team game honors with 586, and Accounts high team set, 1,648.

Jimmy Jolliffe, Accounts and Collections, was high for the night with a game of 156 and a set of 386. Accounts and Collections which took three from Securities rolled high team game, 606, and high team set 1,652.

Ladies Catholic League

L. A. A. O. H., winning the odd game from the leading St. Anthony's team, displaced St. Francis in second place in the Ladies Catholic League at Lucky Strike. Mrs. Clifford, St. Peter's, rolled high individual game, 125, and high individual set, 315. St. Peter's posted high team set, 490, in taking two from St. Francis.

Londos to Return To Old Country

Jim Londos, perenniel victim of wanderlust, has a hankering to return to the old country for a barnstorming tour, he has confided to friends, and probably will sail early in spring. Jim is scheduled to meet Shamus O'Toole, the rugged, handsome young Irishman, tomorrow night at Turner's Arena. Londos' prospective tour depends, of course, on his success in defending his title, and young O'Toole is considered one of his foremost challengers.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, Feb. 6.—Someone once remarked that the only good umpires were dead umpires, but 1,000 baseball fans expressed their disagreement with this theory at the annual writers dinner at the Commodore on Sunday night.

VIDMER.

When Bill Klem, after 37 years behind the bat and on the bases, was presented with a plaque for most distinguished services to the game, the crowd rose out of respect to the grand old man who has been hidden most of these years behind an iron mask.

They had remained seated when the other distinguished speakers and recipients of awards were introduced. They had applauded politely as the postmaster general, the president of the National League, a famous political commentator, a radio humorist, the outstanding player of the 1938 campaign, the man who managed three world's championship teams in succession, the mayor of baseball's birthplace, the president of the world's fair and other celebrities stepped before the microphone to speak. And they had applauded when they finished their speeches and stepped away.

But when Bill Klem arose everyone arose out of sheer and sincere respect for the man who has been calling them for 37 years and who declares he never yet called one wrong. This in itself was perhaps unique; perhaps it was the first time a baseball crowd ever cheered an umpire. But Bill quickly convinced them all that he deserved those cheers.

Without a Mask

He spoke a bit haltingly at first, declaiming routine phrases. But suddenly he stepped back, looked the crowd over and became himself. With a challenging light in his eye, a belligerent set to his jaw and an attitude of arrogance, he became his old swaggering, strutting confident self—the Bill Klem that the baseball world has come to admire and respect.

"I'm always being quoted as saying that I never called one wrong," he said, and when the flurry of suppressed laughter faded away, he added: "Well, I never did! But I'll tell you how that all started. I was umpiring a game long ago at the Polo Grounds. At that time the score board was perched over the foul line, with part of it in fair territory and part of it in foul.

"In a very crucial game one of the Giants slammed a ball up against the scoreboard that would have meant the ball game. But it was foul. John McGraw and all the players yelled their heads off about it, but it was foul, and the other team won.

"The next day when I came out to the park, John Foster told me that the Giants had made him go out that morning and find the dent in the scoreboard and then survey it to see whether it was fair or foul.

"'You know, Mr. Klem,' he said. 'That ball was 3 inches foul.'

"'Young man,' I said. 'Don't think you're telling me anything. I never missed one like that yet.'

"And that's how it all started. Foster told McGraw and McGraw spread it all over the country that I said I never had missed one."

Wright MayOppose Armstrong Here

Chalky Wright, top-ranking colored contender for the featherweight crown, is being sought as an opponent for Henry Armstrong Monday night when the dusky lightweight titleholder boxes an exhibition here.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn already has assigned Billy Banks to one fo the four rounds Armstrong will appear in, and is seeking a welterweight to round out the card. It is doubtful if Wright will be available, but Ahearn has announced that he will appear unless he has a previous engagement.

Friends of Mickey Schoenfeld, Heurich star scorer and cage coach of St. Alban's, reveal that his days at George Washington University were not all taken up with basketball . . . the tiny player was something of an author, too, and if not interesting, at least wordy . . . In a short-story writing class, the professor asked that each student write a short story . . . about 15 typewritten pages was the stipulation . . . Mickey showed up with a 45-page manuscript . . . The Robertson twins at Roosevelt, we are informed, are not the only identical pair to engage in high school athletics here . . . Chester and Franklin Miles performed at Eastern in basketball, football and track . . . Bobby and Richard Poston are students there now . . . and according to Chief Guyon, a blossoming pair of basketeers . . . Of all things, Al Miller, reserve of Roosevelt's cage corps, wants to be a newspaper man . . . After its recent disastrous road trip, many Georgetown University basketball fans shifted their allegiance to other teams . . . but not one enthusiastic youngster . . . If the Hoyas have a game starting at 8:30, he starts calling The Washington Post sports desk at 8 o'clock for results . . . that, my friends, is expectancy . . . When Notre Dame and Kentucky met on the basketball floor recently, the Irish were given 23 chances for single-pointers . . . they sank 22 . . . And next day Coach George Keogan sent the whole squad through a lengthy foul shot drill . . . Pretty Pet Is Easy Winner in Hialeah Distance Feature

Filly Draws Out to Beat Sun Power

Battle Is Two-Horse Affair From Start; Ida Rogers Beaten In Juvenile Contest

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 7.—Under a perfectly judged ride by Apprentice Ronnie Nash, Pretty Pet, recently a good second to the classy Roguish Girl, accounted for major honors in the Lake Worth Purse, a mile and a quarter test for grade "C" veterans that topped the card here this afternoon.

Flying the red and blue silks of M. Leon, Pretty Pet won by a length with something in reserve. She covered the grueling route in 2:03 4-5 and paid the liberal odds of $8.60 for $2. H. R. Bain's Sun Power, favorite in the field of six, saved second money by a head under Warren Yarberry. Wesley Sears Farm's Xavier was an easy third, with Prince Derek, Grandever and Sun Victor bringing up the rear. Another big crowd witnessed the sport under cloudy skies.

It was a two-horse race for the entire 10 furlongs. Yarberry and Nash, two of the star apprentices of 1938, had the issue between them from the drop of the flag, their mounts never being more than a half length apart at any stage of the running. Sun Power broke in front of his chief rival and made the pace into the last furlong. Pretty Pet refused to let the leader get clear.

Answers Drive

The filly responded gamely when called upon after the turn for home. She had plenty left for the drive to the wire and pulled away without undue effort.

Xavier followed the pair closely while racing on the inside, but he was taken out entering the stretch and then lugged in through the late stages.

Herbert M. Woolf's Ida Rogers, unbeaten in three starts here, suffered her first defeat in the 3-furlong dash for 2-year-old fillies that ushered in the program. Coupled with Dewy Dawn and odds-on in the wagering, the daughter of Bob Rogers failed to keep up with the pace and could do no better than fourth.

Apron Strings, a fast-closing second to Ida Rogers in her one previous effort, ran back to that good race and took the purse by a length and a half. Flying Glee was second, a head before Acquin. Apron Strings was hustled to the front after a brief battle for positions and drew out in the final drive to pay $13.50. The time was 0:34.

Donna Leona Scores

Donna Leona, reputed to be the smallest horse at the track, left her field groggy behind her in the 7-furlong fifth race, for $3,500 top and $3,000 bottom platers. The tiny daughter of Don Leon—Myrtle Belle sprinted to the front in short order under her 101 pounds, which included Apprentice Charlton. The filly's pursuers found the dizzy pace too much and Donna Leona widened her advantage to win by four lengths in 1:23 3-5. She paid $7.00. Play Gold was a long shot second, a length before Terpsichore.

APRON STRINGS, quickest to find her stride, drew clear under punishment in the run out of the chute and, kept under vigorous pressure throughout, maintained her lead determinedly. FLYING GLEE broke alertly, bore in slightly under punishment and made a game effort and outlasted ACQUIN. The latter raced straight and gamely the entire trip, but could not get up. IDA ROGERS broke well, but continued to drift behind the leaders while under pressure and Smith could not do her full justice.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:36. Winner, D. J. Sullivan's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAKUS, $7.90, $5.00, $2.80; GRAND JESTER, $7.30, $4.10; FAIR, $2.90.
TAKUS, on the outside and going in close attendance of the pace from the start, drew clear through the stretch, but was under extreme pressure to withstand GRAND JESTER'S challenge. The latter, strongly urged, gradually bettered his position while circling the field and was wearing the winner down at the end. FAIR began fast, displayed the most speed, but then weakened in the final furlong. BALCONY finished with good courage.

Daily Double, Apron Strings and Takus, Paid $48.90.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAUNDERSTOWN, $3.90, $2.90, $2.70; KNOWING, $8.40, $6.70; FREE CHILD, $8.80.
SAUNDERSTOWN, going forwardly on the outside from the start, responded with determination to a strong hand ride through the stretch and outlasted KNOWING in the final drive. KNOWING, displaying keen speed while saving ground, held on gamer than usual when challenged. FREE CHILD worked his way up while slipping through on the inside all the way and closed going strongest of all. CRUISING, prominent contender all the way, faltered in the stretch drive.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WILLIAM PALMER, $7.00, $3.90, $2.90; POMPEY'S PILLAR, $21.30, $7.20; FAUST, $3.60.
WILLIAM PALMER, breaking well, went forwardly on the outside in the early stages, began to improve his position in the final three furlongs and disposed of the leaders through the stretch, but had to be hard driven to withstand POMPEY'S PILLAR. The latter, saving much ground, gained steadily and made a bold effort, but could not overtake the winner. FAUST, slow to get going, swung to the outside entering the stretch, responded to punishment and finished with a belated rush. EXHILARATION set a swift pace and tired in the stretch run. BIRDLEA, well up early, faltered under pressure in the final quarter mile.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:09. DONNA LEONA, away alertly, assumed command with a rush and set a fast pace throughout and opened up a winning lead entering the stretch to win mildly urged. PLAY GOLD, going prominently while saving ground, responded gamely when the final test came and held TERPSICHORE safe. The latter, well up on the outside, dropped back on the stretch turn, but finished resolutely. SUNPHANTOM had no mishaps.

PRETTY PET, away forwardly, went in close attendance of the pace from the start, responded with determination under a brisk hand ride through the stretch and won going away. SUN POWER, hustled to the front, set a steady pace while saving ground, but faltered when the real test came. He appeared sore going to the post and pulled up lame. XAVIER moved up rapidly on the inside to the backstretch, but was in close quarters until midway around the lower turn. He was eased back and taken around the leaders and closed gamely, but could not get up. PRINCE DEREK went to the extreme outside on the stretch turn, made a bold bid, but retired in the final furlong.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:06. RUSHAWAY, steadied off the pace while saving ground rounding the first turn, moved up steadily after going a half mile, but then was pinched back midway around the turn, continued on the inside and, responding gamely through the stretch, wore the leaders down and won going away. UVALDE, on the outside all the way, lost ground entering the stretch, but closed gamely and outlasted the others. STRUT set a good pace and held on tenaciously in the final drive. LASSATOR, in close pursuit of STRUT all the way, finished stoutly and had no excuses.

JINX, kept in close pursuit of the leader from the start, finished courageously under extreme urging through the stretch and got up in the last strides. BAREBACK held his opposition safe for speed and was rated in front while saving ground, drew out at the furlong pole, but Yarberry became anxious and placed him under punishment from which he faltered. GOLDEN X, slow to get going, gained steadily in the last three furlongs and disposed of SUN APOLLO. The latter, forced to race very wide, hung in the final drive.

$2,000 Allowance Race Draws Seabiscuit Today

By the United Press.

Santa Anita Park, Calif., Feb. 7.—Seabiscuit goes out tomorrow to try to justify his rating as future book favorite for the fifth running of the $100,000-added Santa Anita Handicap, the stake that may enable him to supplant Sun Beau as the turf's biggest money winner.

The Charles S. Howard Handicap champion was named for a $2,000 allowance race over a mile route, his first start since defeating War Admiral at Pimlico last November 1. The Biscuit will face only two rivals, Mrs. E. Denemark's War Minstrel, winner of the Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park last season, and the French Lick Springs Stable's Marica, America's top mare.

Seabiscuit, now just $36,000 shy of the $376,744 Sun Beau record, will carry top weight of 128 pounds on the age scale. War Minstrel will handle 114, and Marica one pound less. The race will be the first start this winter for Marica, and the second for War Minstrel, who ran out of the money in a previous effort.

Trainer Tom Smith, who has announced the Howard Stable will be shooting with Seabiscuit in the big handicape despite the possibility Sorteado and Kayak II may accompany him, did not disclose his selection of a jockey. War Minstrel, who defeated the Biscuit and War Admiral both in the space of eight days last year, will be ridden by Carroll Bierman. Marica will be piloted by her regular jockey, Bobby Dotter.

Seabiscuit was priced at 2½ to 1 and 3 to 1 in future books for the Santa Anita, which will be run March 4, and is the overwhelming choice of Western turf writers to capture the $100,000 after losing it to Rosemont in 1937 and Stagehand in 1938. The race tomorrow is expected to be his only trial spin.

B. P. Wooson's Leading Article won the featured 6-furlong Pacific Palisades Handicap today and Sorteado ran last in a six-horse field.

Leading Article, coholder of the track record for the distance, came fast in the stretch for a head margin over the pacesetter, the Circle M. Ranch's Speed to Spare, and paid $7.60, $4.60 and $2.20 across the board. Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Airflame was third. The time was 1:11, over a fast track.

U. S. Increases Export Sales To 26 Nations

Britain Largest Buyer With Canada Next; Canada Leading Seller

By the Associated Press.

The Commerce Department, analyzing last year's 8 per cent drop in exports, found an encouraging note today in the fact that 26 countries—including such important customers as the Netherlands, Russia and the Scandinavian countries—increased their purchases in this country. Sales to England dipped slightly lower than in 1937. Sales to France, Germany, Belgium, Italy and Japan fell off.

Total exports dropped to $3,094,095,000 in 1938. This was attributed largely to lower prices. While American imports fell off 36 per cent to $1,960,528,000 last year, this country bought more in Honduras, the Netherland West Indies, Finland, Turkey, French Indo-China and South America.

The United Kingdom was, as usual, the largest buyer of American products, taking $521,000,000, or nearly 17 per cent of United States exports. Canada again was second.

Canada Leading Seller

Canada again was the leading seller to the United States, with $260,274,000, followed by Japan, the United Kingdom, British Malaya, Cuba and Brazil. The only change in this ranking was the drop of British Malaya from second to fourth.

In Latin America, where the Administration is seeking to stimulate trade, United States sales declined 12 per cent.

The biggest change in the Nation's export trade occurred in the Far East, where war complications caused sharp curtailment of purchases of American cotton and scrap iron, although more motor trucks, aircraft, metal working machinery, copper and crude petroleum were sold.

The sharp decline in United States purchases in Latin America, was largely due to decreased buying of corn from Argentina and the decline in prices of coffee and sugar.

Cotton Lower; Range Narrow

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Rumors of impending changes in Federal crop control legislation kept the cotton trade on the alert for news today but the futures market held to a narrow course, ending 3 to 6 points lower.

A flurry of selling toward the finish, centering on options representing the next crop due for marketing in the summer and autumn, was ascribed chiefly to the various guesses in speculative circles as to what Washington would do to meet the problem of the accumulating surplus of American cotton.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures scurried up and down the price scale today in heavy trading. After general liquidation had again left prices at 4½-year lows, selling completely stopped. An increase in commission-house buying led to scattered covering, which disclosed a sold-out market. Final prices were 1 to 6 points net higher. Sales totaled 425 lots. March closed 6.49; May, 6.65; July, 6.75; September, 6.79. Bids of 5¼ cents were made for crude oil in the Southeast and Valley, and sales at 5¼ occurred in Texas.

Phila. & Reading Coal Head Called "Incompetent"

Philadelphia, Feb. 7 (AP).—Counsel for a minority group of Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co. bondholders charged at a hearing today that Ralph E. Taggart, company president, was "incompetent" and "should be ousted at once." Archibald Palmer, of New York, made the statement during arguments on his petition for a trustee to handle the company's affairs while it is being reorganized under the bankruptcy laws. The bondholders charge the company officials with "waste and mismanagement."

After Palmer had called attention to the fact the company had leased its Bear Valley Coal Lands because it was unable to operate them profitably, Charles H. Strange, consulting mining engineer of Pottsville, Pa., testified the property is now being worked. Palmer commented:

"This indicates to me that Taggart is incompetent to manage the company and should be ousted at once. He is a dummy president, because directors control him. He is only a front man. The people who bought the property are making money whereas the company lost money on the operation."

Palmer said he would ask United States Senator James J. Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, to press for a Federal investigation of the company.

Profit-Taking Results in Irregular Closings Restriction of Trading Volume a Feature Bond Market Drifts to Lower Level

New York, Feb. 7.—Professional elements in the stock market decided today to take profits in utilities after Monday's boom. This, combined with trader hesitation based on new uncertainties in both the national and international political situations, resulted in irregularly lower prices for securities. It was a day of reactions, bonds, the dollar, wheat and cotton also drifting lower.

Failure of the utilities to show steadiness following general acclaim of the TVA-Tennessee Electric Power Co. deal and confident assertions from many quarters that this presages a new era of harmony in Government-business relations, disappointed traders and kept them on the sidelines. Contraction in volume was marked, turnover on the stock exchange of 570,040 shares being about half of Monday's transfers. The composite price for the 100 key stocks dropped 0.42 point.

While securities of companies affected or likely to be affected by the Tennessee power sale were not especially weak, the reverse to other power shares which shared in the advance of the previous day was sharp, notably in preferred stocks. Brokers explained that buyers, in their anxiety to get aboard what appeared to be the beginning of a broad movement, had bought more or less indiscriminately. Today's market saw, in addition to profit taking, a reshuffling of holdings which involved the deflation of prices in sections where technicians believed the rise had been too rapid.

Recession General

While utilities receded moderately on activity, the downturn in such descriptions as stores, rail equipments, motors and steels was more pronounced on light dealings. More than half of the 15 most active again were power issues, the remainder including sprinklings from other groups. The 75-cent dividend by General Motors, announced after Monday's close, failed to stimulate demand for automotives. General Motors common was off half a point at the finish while Chrysler dipped 1⅛. While the 75-cent payment was better than many had expected, it was fully justified by earnings. The 1938 profits, given late today by the company, disclosed net equal to $2.17 a share with well over 60 per cent earned in the final quarter.

Aircrafts, while not especially in demand, tended to move against the general trend. Those interested in the group are well satisfied with prospects, particularly for manufacturing units and aeronautical issues are said to be more popular with investment trusts than ever before.

WPA Appropriation

On the political fronts, Wall street scanned Washington reports which included President Roosevelt's demand for restoration of the $150,000,000 cut from WPA appropriations. It was remarked that the Chief Executive's claim of "emergency" does not dovetail with Administration declarations that business is continuing its recovery virtually unchecked.

Another report from the Capital, which forecast creation of an entirely new Federal Communications Commission, did contain implications decidedly bullish to business. The commission's probe of the A. T. & T. system, which was so widely criticized as unfair by American management last year, has now been assessed as improperly conducted and valueless by governmental experts, including Frank R. McNinch, chairman. The inquiry cost the country $1,500,000 and communications companies much more in accounting, legal fees and effects of adverse publicity.

The street reacted favorably to reports of a trade agreement between Italy and the Soviet Union and negotiations between British and German industrialists to accelerate commercial relations. Both moves, it is felt, will aid the cause of peace.

Bond Market Narrow

Listed bonds were idle today and mostly lower. Both high grade and speculative issues drifted downward, with almost all changes fractional. The session was marked mainly by apathy, and where changes exceeded a point the situation plainly was one of small offerings and even more modest bids. The utility issues which were in demand on the previous day tended to slip lower again to levels current before the TVA episode developed. Brokers reported a waiting attitude among their clients, which accounted for the turnover of only $5,210,000.

United States Treasury issues showed losses of 1-32 to 6-32 point, but these changes merely indicated that portfolio adjustments were being made in preparation for the March financing, which now is under active discussion in Wall Street. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds held to within small fractions of previous levels, and a few inactive bonds registered belated rises.

Medium-priced carrier liens were once again the most active group. A few of these issues reflected buying for investment or speculative account, but the great majority showed losses ranging from small fractions to a point. Borderline and default rails were off. Local traction and communications bonds varied in either direction. International Telephone bonds were maintained despite the developments in Spain. Other special groups were dull.

Wheat Rallies From Drop But Closes Lower

Overseas Markets Off Mills Are Buyers Corn Prices Steady

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Wheat prices rallied from a mid-session drop of ¾ cent today to finish ¼@⅜ cent under Monday's close. The market was more active than in several days.

Scattered early selling was induced by lower than due Liverpool quotations and a weaker tone in other overseas markets. At their maximum decline wheat prices here were the lowest since last December.

The decline, however, brought forth support from commission houses and Northwest interests. A demand for wheat from outside mills was reported, shippers estimating sales at 87,000 bushels. There was little overnight export business in American grains.

Wheat closed ⅛@⅜ down, May and July 68⅛@68; corn unchanged to ¼ down, May 49½@⅝, July 50⅝; oats unchanged to ⅛ lower, May 28¼; soy beans ¼@¾ higher, May 50¾; rye ⅜@½ lower, May 45⅛; lard 5 to 8 cents lower, May 6.47, July 6.65, September 6.80.

Standard Brands Nets 62c a Share in 1938

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Standard Brands, Inc., a leading factor in the branded foods industry, reported today consolidated 1938 net income of $8,721,305, equal to 62 cents a share on the common stock, compared with $9,889,234, or 73 cents a share, in 1937. For the final three months of the year, profit amounted to $2,567,297, equal to 18 cents a share on the common, against $1,845,934, or 13 cents a share, in the final quarter of 1937 and $1,887,747, or 13 cents a share, in the third quarter last year.

Directors declared a dividend of 12½ cents a share on the common, the same as was paid in the two preceding quarters, payable April 1 to holders of record February 17.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 7.—Trading in the stock market today was less active but prices held steady. Disappointing employment figures caused industrials to ease slightly. Brewery shares moved higher and British funds were firm on continued investment buying. Foreign bonds advanced and rails were quietly firm. Transatlantics, oils and rubbers moved evenly.

Paris—The bourse closed with a weak tone today. Rentes lost 15 to 150 centimes and Bank of France was off 115 francs. Suez Canal and Royal Dutch were both more than 100 francs down.

Liverpool—Final cotton prices today were off 3 to 4 points. After early steadiness, the market declined on Bombay and Alexandria selling. Wheat futures ended ⅛-1 lower to ¼d higher. Nearby positions were sold, reflecting freer Australian offerings against limited demand. Adverse crop reports from sections of Europe supplied the main prop for distant months.

$18,500,000 Gold Shipped Here by Britain, Holland

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—One of the largest gold cargoes shipped here in recent months—estimated at about $18,500,000—arrived today to augment the Nation's huge monetory metal supply.

The gold came from England and Holland. Funds were moving out of London and Amsterdam to New York recently in a revival of war fears before the Hitler speech to the German Reichstag last week. The metal inflow, however, has been going on with little interruption for four years. The gold was bought by bankers for sale to the United States Treasury in the ordinary course of foreign exchange transactions.

Exceptionally large shipments of Chinese silver also arrived by way of London, the chief world market for the metal. Financial circles had no figures on the dollar total involved.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

University of Michigan Alumni Club presents the University of Michigan Little Symphony in the Raleigh Hotel Tuesday evening. Conductor: Thor Johnson. Program: Overture to "Joseph" (Mehul), Symphony No. 12 in E major (Haydn), Adagio, Op. 3 (Lekeu), five pieces from "For Children" (Tansman), Interludium in Modo Antico (Glazunov), "Valse Badinage" (Lyadov), "La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin" (Debussy), Suite in F major (Franck).

Making its first visit to Washington, the Little Symphony of the University of Michigan was welcomed last evening by an audience that nearly filled the ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel. Reports which one had heard occasionally about the merits of this progressive organization of 15 musicians were fully justified by their deeds. Not only was the playing neatly ordered and well balanced, but the program was also one enjoyable for its divagations from the narrow path of routine. Conductor Thor Johnson is evidently a connoisseur who follows his own taste rather than that of a hypothetical public.

He began the program with the overture to "Joseph," the well-nigh forgotten operatic masterpiece of Etienne Nicolas Mehul, who was an idol of the Parisians in the first decade of the last century. If the overture is a fair sample of the beauties of the score, the opera does not deserve its present obscurity, even though it offers no romantic appeal with its entirely masculine cast of characters. The music has harmonic charm and originality.

Next came one of Haydn's early symphonies, the twelfth in E major, a delightfully fresh and entertaining work. In contrast to its genniality was the nostalgic mediation of Guillaume Lekeu's "Adagio," a lovely musical poem by the ill-starred pupil of Franck and d'Indy. Lekeu had a touch of genius in his talent, and was writing with increasing power when he died at the age of 24 ere he could fulfill his promise.

From Alexander Tansman's piano pieces "For Children" the conductor presented his own deft scoring of "Hide and Seek," "Waltz," "Mechanical Horse," "Blues" and 'Military March.' Contrary to the usual effect of transcribed piano music, these pieces sound much better in orchestral dress. One cannot say the same for Debussy's "La Fille aux Cheveux de Lin," which loses its magic once the medium is changed. The piano music of neither Chopin nor Debussy should ever be taken away from the instrument.

Madras Delegates Attend Missionary Conference Here

Future of Missions Depends on Understanding Of Men in the Field, Conference Told Here

The future of foreign missionary work, particularly in India, China, Japan and Africa, will depend upon a new basis of fellowship and understanding in the field, Miss Ila Sircar, of India, said last night at the Post-Madras Foreign Missionary Conference.

The conference is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

"India is willing to support missionaries, but they must be of a different type," said Miss Sircar, associate general secretary of the student Christian movement there. "They must be men interested in the basic problems of the people and in helping to build a new economic order. They must be colleagues."

A vivid picture of the situation Christianity faces in China was panted by Prof. P. C. Hsu, of the University of Shanghai, who said that, despite the persecution, suffering and opposition the church is facing in his country, Christianity is making progress.

Dr. Hsu said that "the missionary's role in relief and other phases of work has convinced the Chinese that the church is their real refuge."

Addressing the morning assembly on "What the Madras Conference Has Meant to Mexico," Dr. Baez Camargo, executive secretary of the National Council of Evangelical Churches in Mexico, said that "the unity and co-operation stressed at Madras was encouraging for Christianity in Mexico." Dr. Leslie B. Moss secretary of the foreign missions conference, presided.

Among local churchmen taking part in the conference were Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, chairman; Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church, which is host to the conference; Dr. William S. Abernathy, Calvary Baptist pastor, and Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Federation of Churches; Dr. Horace E. Cromer, its president, and others.

Closing sessions today will include a special women's meeting at 10 a. m., and a mass meeting at 8 p. m.

FDIC Surplus Hit For First Time by '38 Bank Closings

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation disclosed yesterday that closing of banks during the recession forced it to dip into surplus to pay expenses last year for the first time since it was organized in 1933.

In former years the corporation paid all expenses out of the interest on investments without touching revenue it acquires from assessing insured banks.

In 1938, however, expenses totaled $11,709,846 and interest on investments was $9,440,187.

Chapel Choir Concert Tomorrow Evening

The nationally renowned a cappella Chapel Choir, of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, will present a concert at the Washington Cathedral tomorrow at 8 p. m., under the auspices of the local Lutheran churches. Dr. Carl C. Rasmussen, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, will conduct a devotional period. Directed by Emanuel Snyder, the 60-voiced choir is in its tenth year of concert singing.

Rumania Plans Peace Moves Toward Russia

Bucharest, Feb. 7 (AP).—Rumania's reconstructed cabinet proclaimed tonight it would maintain peaceful relations with Russia and try to develop more friendly relations with Hungary and Bulgaria.

Mention of Russia was regarded as an indication that agitation throughout the Balkans to line up new members for the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo anti-Communist pact had been unsuccessful in Rumania.

Pianist Strangled; Police Hold Ex-Convict

New York, Feb. 7 (AP).—Charmaine Edwards, 47, once a successful pianist but recently on relief, was found strangled to death in a tenement house today and James Powers, 29, paroled convict, was held on a homicide charge in the case.

Police said he admitted he and the woman had engaged in an argument.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

T. N. Winslow, who is still rabid against slam conventions which literally name aces and kings, delivers this allegory in criticism of them:

"Many years ago a story went the rounds of two Irishmen who had recently arrived in America and were proceeding westward. It was in the early fall of the year and persimmons, of which they had heard high praise, were in the first stages of ripening. As they journeyed, they came across a fine specimen of the persimmon tree. Quite naturally, they decided upon having a taste of the fruit, of which they had heard such glowing accounts. They found no fruit on the ground, and Pat, the better climber, scaled the tree and shook its boughs vigorously. Until thoroughly ripe, persimmons hold tenaciously to their moorings, and nothing dropped but a small tree-frog. This Mike avidly seized. The surprised frog said, 'crockit,' to which Mike replied, 'Crockit or straat, ye gotta go down.'

"The game of contract is in like case with the poor frog. Crooked or straight it is going down the gullets of the millions who play or play at the game.

"If by common consent players cheat others and allow themselves to be cheated by others, that is one thing. If players deliberately expose their cards by their bids or calls that is quite another thing. They cheat the game and make a mockery of it. In the experting endeavor, we seem to have run amuck, and it is now time for some expurgating."

However much we may believe in card-naming conventions, Winslow has a sound argument against them. The same argument was put forth by a group of English experts when they protested against the use of the Culbertson four-five no-trump convention. They were overruled by a younger and larger group, on the ground that artificial bids for various purposes are recognized as an integral part of bidding system.

Players are still having lots of fun with the Blackwood bid for the showing of aces and kings, and Walter Salmon, jr., contributes today's hand, in which both North and South had a chance to use the Blackwood query.

Today's Hand

North, South Vulnerable

North Dealer

North: ♠ K Q 7 5 ♡ 2 ◇ A K 6 4 ♣ A Q J 5

West: ♠ 9 2 ♡ K Q 10 7 ◇ 9 7 5 3 ♣ 10 8 4

East: ♠ A 6 ♡ J 9 8 4 3 ◇ 10 8 2 ♣ 6 3 2

South: ♠ J 10 8 4 3 ♡ A 6 5 ◇ Q J ♣ K 9 7

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	5 NT	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	6 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

The hand and bidding are shown in the box. North first made the call of four no-trump, which requires South to designate the number of aces he holds by replying with five clubs (no aces), five diamonds (one ace), five hearts (two aces), or five spades (three aces). South replied correctly, saying he had one ace. Then, after North next bid, he insisted upon carrying the contract higher and bid five no trump, which is the Blackwood way of asking partner to name his kings. North replied with six hearts, saying he had two kings, and South then went to six spades, where the matter rested.

No doubt Mr. Window and supporters of natural bidding methods could have reached six spades with much less trouble than did North-South, but look at all the run they had!

There is no play to the hand. Declarer simply wins the heart lead with the ace and leads trumps, conceding the ace to East. The rest of his tricks are solid.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

About Town:

THE FCC looks keenly to those impending confabs between its Mr. McNinch and Senator Wheeler because the $2,000,000 asked for hasn't been forthcoming, and if matters aren't settled by July 1, there will be no funds . . . It's amazing how the young U. S. Travel Bureau has run all the gantlets without getting any wallops. Young bureaus—those in process of being officially born—generally attract a hue and cry. Right now, the cautious Senator Bailey, of North Carolina, is getting things ready to put the bureau before Congress; in the House, Representative C. F. Lea, of California, is moving likewise. Tycoons of American industry, who generally bait young bureaus, were in town the other day and sang of the travel idea to step up American tourist business.

THE magazine Fortune has been asking the FCC about the prospects of an article on television, a problem the FCC's technicians have been bedeviled with . . . We mentioned recently the strong bid the Agriculture Department will make from now on for the bright young scientists graduated every June from the colleges. The department will, as said, have special investigators on the campuses to interview the prospective talent. Some of the questions the interviewers will ask the prospects will take this general shape:

Education; high school; course; other activities; outside activities, including work; any evidence of popularity; work activities during college and vacation; what does candidate wish to do; interviewer's opinion of what he should do; applicant's outstanding weaknesses are; statement by deans, officers and professors; physique and general appearance . . . The form is to be filled out by the interviewer and kept strictly from the eyes of the applicant. Somehow, there is nothing new in Agriculture's going after the bright grads. The legal divisions all over town have done so for years, even to the extreme of saying what college a man—to be a good man—should have come from. That's one reason the lawyers didn't want civil service; they believed they could still get better timber by picking the bright young grads from the "right" colleges.

DEADLINE on the wage-hour inspector jobs passed yesterday, but a new batch of swell occupations appears, as follows: Consultant in employe-employer relations, $5,600, Office of Education, Interior Department. There is only one of these jobs open there. It will be placed in the vocational division. Mediator and principal, senior and associate mediators, $3,200 to $5,600, National Mediation Board and Maritime Labor Board; industrial economist (labor economics), $3,800, also senior grade, $4,600, and principal grade, $5,500, wage-hour division. Also associate industrial economist (minimum wage laws), $3,200; assistant grade, $2,600, Women's Bureau, Labor Department. Also, agronomist (tobacco investigations), $3,800, and associate pathologist (tobacco investigations), $3,200, Bureau of Plant Industry, Agriculture Department. C. S. jobs.

THE budget provides $1,000,000 for establishment of an eight-hour day for the beset Veterans Administration employes. The $1,000,000 was approved after a survey to learn the V. A.'s needs and now it is proposed that V. A. Administrator Hines make another survey to determine whether the $1,000,000 is enough actually to assure an eight-hour day to so many employes. By the time all these survey of surveys is made the employes will have piled up several thousand more hours of overtime.

IN that badminton craze that Nelson Loomis introduced in the Government, Bob Fernsler is showing the greatest skill, with Wilkerson and Bob Bryson next in order. The officers of the club are Bob Bryson, president; Nelson, chairman; Lou Croft, club manager, and Louise Ponder, secretary-treasurer . . . Agriculture Graduate School topic for tomorrow 4:30 p. m., "The Administrative Process in Relation to the Policy Making Process," by Arthur W. MacMahon, professor of public law, Columbia University . . . The A. F. G. E.'s executive council comes to town Friday for three days to encounter no hot issues. The legislative program will be the principal meat.

Bob Burns Says—

People do goofy things every once an' awhile. A man strolled along Third avenue in New York City the other night, with the temperature around 20 degrees above zero an' a stiff breeze blowin'. He didn't have nothin' on but one sock. A patrolman took one look at him an' gave him another sock—on the jaw. Then he asked him what was the big idea, steppin' out like this, in the "altogether." An' the guy answers, "Spring, spring, beautiful spring!" "But this ain't spring, it's midwinter!" says the policeman. "An' the only thing that's balmy around here is you!" By this time the bird is takin' a nice ride in the ambulance over to Bellevue. "Why did you only put one sock on?" the cop asks. "My foot was cold," says he. "But how about the rest of you?" asks the cop. "Now, don't try to get me confused, officer," says the guy. "Jes' take me one at a time!"

Yes, us humans are strange animals. You can't figger out what we're gonna do next. That's why I'm kinda inclined to agree with the kid who wrote in his school paper: "Man sprang from monkeys, only he didn't spring far enough!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Whitey Still Lives High

Whitey the Snowy Owl had seen most of the Lemmings of the Far North leave the neighborhood where he made his home. It had been a sight that never would he forget. In a great horde they had migrated. That is, they had marched away in search of new feeding grounds. Flying above them and looking down, Whitey could hardly see the ground for the mass of hurrying brown forms pressing on, they knew not where. For a long way they had been followed by the eaters of meat, Whitey among them. Full fed, these hunters had slowly returned to their homes. And when they became hungry again they mostly hunted in vain for those brown-coated, short-tailed cousins of the Mouse family; the few remaining kept so well hidden that the hunters would have starved, had they been wholly dependent on Lemmings for their food.

But they were not. In an area where there were many thickets of stunted trees and bushes—for up there none grow tall—it seemed as if there was one of Jumper the Hare's family hidden under or behind every tree and bush. They are called Snowshoe Rabbits, a mistake, because they are not Rabbits, but true Hares. All the short summer brown forms of various sizes were hopping about everywhere. With the migrating of the Lemmings, Whitey and the other meat eaters turned to these and that season they lived high. Yes, sir; they lived high. They certainly did.

"That was an easy winter," Whitey told his cousin, Hooty the Great Horned Owl. "I don't recall an easier winter. The weather was as cold as ever it is and there were fierce storms, but who cares what the weather is if there be plenty to eat? And there was plenty. Yes, sir; there was plenty. I don't remember that I went hungry, really hungry, for a single day. One didn't have to look far to find one of those long-eared jumpers."

"Of course. Everybody, or almost everybody, wears white in winter up where I come from," replied Whitey.

"That must make it hard hunting. I'm glad I don't live up there," Hooty hissed.

"It wasn't hard hunting that season. It was the easiest hunting I can remember," replied Whitey. "As I said before, I didn't know what it was to be hungry."

"I would like to spend a winter like that. I seldom know what it is not to be hungry," declared Hooty. "I have caught one of Jumper's youngsters now and then, but I never have been able to get my claws on Jumper himself. In that white coat of his it is hard work to see him against the snow, but he can see me. Oh, yes; he can see me, especially in the day time. It is only when it is dark that I can hunt to advantage. Then I am sometimes mistaken for one of the Black Shadows. Hares and Rabbits are good eating. I wish I had one right now."

"They are good eating," agreed Whitey with something that sounded like a sigh. "I haven't tasted one since I left home. I saw only two or three on the way down and had no chance to catch these. And to think that there was a time when I could catch one whenever I felt hungry. Ah, me! Those were the days when I lived high. And all the other eaters of meat lived high. I little thought then that I would come to this."

"If you don't like it, go back where you belong. I'm sure no one wants you here," declared Hooty.

"I would go back gladly if there was enough left to eat up there, but there isn't. Nearly all those Rabbits died. Even old Snow King was having a hard time," replied Whitey.

"Who is old Snow King?" demanded Hooty.

Vaccine Rushed To Flood Areas; Ohio at Crest

10,000 Families Affected In Five States; Scores Driven From Homes

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 7.—Vaccine for 250,000 persons was rushed to 30 flood-stricken eastern Kentucky mountain counties today to fight influenza and pneumonia as the Ohio River, rising slowly from Cincinnati toward the Mississippi, spread over additional lowland areas.

Red Cross disaster committees along the Ohio River south of Cincinnati "stood by" for emergency duty, but authorities said there was no chance of 1937's high mar being repeated.

A cold wave sweeping down on the Midwest was expected to check the rise of swollen tributaries to the Ohio, but carried with it the possibility of further suffering among hundreds of families driven from their homes.

Dr. A. T. McCormack, State health commissioner, asked for an appropriation from the emergency fund of the United States Public Health Service.

10,000 Families Affected

The Ohio reached its crest at Cincinnati at 58.2 feet. The water inundated 35 city blocks.

At Louisville, the river reached 33.1 feet at 3 p. m., and was rising at the rate of 0.1 feet an hour, but the city was assured of a "big margin of safety" by Meteorologist J. L. Kendall. The crest of 35 feet was expected to morrow.

Driven From Homes

In southern Indiana several score families left their lowland homes. The river at Evansville was expected to go to 45 feet. Flood stage is 35 feet.

All danger from a serious flood on the St. Francis River in southeast Missouri appeared to have passed.

Roosevelt Lauds Sale of Tennessee Utilities to TVA

President Roosevelt yesterday described the agreement to sell Tennessee Power & Electric Co. properties to the TVA as an excellent solution of a difficult problem.

He said the agreement would make possible a reduction of between 20 and 30 per cent in the electric power rates in that area, and he regarded this as worth while.

In the House, Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, ridiculed TVA as a "vast inland empire that is freezing strawberries, inventing electric haymakers, planting trees, generating electricity and spewing concrete over 500,000 acres of land."

Modern Travel Media Menace U. S. Wildlife

Increasing international commerce, auto and airplane travel, are introducing new tree diseases which imperil American wildlife, as well as trees, themselves, the Botanical Society of Washington was told last night.

"We were very much disturbed," said Dr. G. F. Gravatt, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, "at the rapid rate at which new destructive tree diseases are appearing in this country.

Leaf spots and fungus, he says are reducing the vigor of trees and curtailing their output of fruits and nuts, on which animals depend. Other problems include the chestnut blight, a root rot of chestnuts, a new persimmon wilt, and diseases of beeches and willows.

Text of President Roosevelt's Letter to Judge Roberts

WASHINGTON.
Feb. 7, 1939.

My dear Judge Roberts:

I feel that in justice to you and your family I should write to you in regard to the refusal of the Senate to confirm your appointment as United States District Judge for the Western District of Virginia.

First of all, I tender you my thanks for the honorable, efficient and in every way praiseworthy service that you have rendered to the people of the United States in general and to the people of the Western District of Virginia in particular.

Second, I wish it known that not one single person who has opposed your confirmation has lifted his voice in any shape, manner or form against your personal integrity and ability.

In order that you may know the full history of what has occurred, I take this opportunity to summarize the story.

On March 17, 1938, I received a letter from Senator Glass inclosing a clipping from a local Virginia paper. This newspaper article, quoting an editorial in another local Virginia paper, made the assumption that it would henceforth be necessary to receive the backing of Gov. Price of Virginia before any Virginian could hope for a Federal appointment.

Senator Glass in his letter asked if Federal appointments, for which Senate approval was necessary, would be subjected to the effective veto of the Governor of Virginia.

To this I replied on March 18, explaining to the Senator the difference between the appointive power, which is in the President, and the power of confirmation, which is in the Senate. I pointed out to the Senator that time hallowed courtesy permits Senators and others to make recommendations for nomination, and, at the same time, that every President has sought information from any other source deemed advisable.

On March 19 Senator Glass wrote me again, covering his construction of Article II of the Constitution, and asking me again as to the accuracy of the newspaper statement. He winds up by saying "the inference is, of course, that you approve the offensive publication which was the basis of my inquiry."

I replied to this letter from the Senator on March 21 in a personal and friendly vein. I stated that I was glad that we seemed to agree in our construction of the Constitution. I told him that I was not in the habit of confirming or denying any newspaper article or editorial. Obviously if I were to begin that sort of thing, I would have no spare time to attend to my executive duties.

I told the Senator to go ahead as before and make recommendations; that I would give such recomendations every consideration; but that I would, of course, reserve the right to get opinions from any other person I might select. I ended by asking the Senator to forget the newspaper article and wished him a good vacation and expressed the hope that he would come to see me on his return.

Subsequent to this date, I received a number of recommendations for the position of United States district judge for the Western District of Virginia—among them recommendations in behalf of two gentlemen from Senator Glass. I am not certain whether these recommendations were at that time concurred in by the junior Senator from Virginia, but this is possible. Other recommendations were received from citizens of Virginia to a total number, as I remember it, of five or six.

The Attorney General was asked by me to report on these recommendations, paying attention as usual to the qualifications of each person suggested. I might add that your name was on this list but that at no time, to my knowledge, did you seek this office of judge.

The Attorney General and I held several conferences with the result that we concluded that you were best fitted to fill the judgeship.

As a result, I wrote on July 6 to both of the Virginia Senators stating that I had concluded to appoint you, that a number of gentlemen had been suggested for the place, but that I believed you to be the best fitted.

The following day, July 7, I received a telegram from Senator Glass stating that he and his colleague would feel obliged to object to your appointment as being personally objectionable to them, and that a letter would follow. A few days later I received a letter from the Senator stating that he could not conceive any fair reason why one of his candidates had not been appointed.

It is worth noting that neither Senator on July 7 or subsequently raised any question as to your integrity or ability, and the only objection was that you were personally objectionable.

In regard to the original newspaper article suggesting that Gov. Price had been given the veto over Federal appointments, this and similar stories are, of course, not worth answering or bothering about, for the very simple reason that no person—no Governor, no Senator, no member of the Administration has at any time had, or ever will have, any right of veto over Presidential nominations. Every person with common sense knows this.

Your appointment followed, you took the oath of office, and have been serving with great credit as district judge since then.

Your name was sent by me to the Senate in January, 1939, together with many other recess appointments.

We come now to the last chapter. Your nomination was referred to the Judiciary Committee of the Senate and by the chairman of that committee to a subcommittee of three. It appears from the record that both Senators from Virginia registered their objections with the sub-committee, saying "this nomination is utterly and personally offensive to the Virginia Senators whose suggestions were invited by the Department of Justice, only to be ignored." The sub-committee reported back the nomination to the full committee without recommendation, stating the raising of the matter of Senatorial courtesy and saying that this matter had not been a direct issue since 1913.

At a special meeting of the full Committee on the Judiciary, and before the committee went into executive session, attention was invited to the presence of the Governor of Virginia, to the presence of two former Governors of Virginia, and to the presence of the nominee and his counsel.

After lengthy discussion the committee went into executive session, reopening the doors an hour later.

The record shows that at this time the committee heard the Governor of Virginia in favor of the nominee and also former Gov. E. Lee Trinkle and former Gov. Westmoreland Davis; also, George M. Warren, Esq., counsel for nominee. Thereupon the committee, instead of hearing other witnesses in behalf of the nominee, many of whom were present, moved that a list of these further witnesses be incorporated in the record without hearing them. The committee also agreed to receive certain letters and editorials in behalf of the nominee, and, finally, a record of designations you have received from former Governors of Virginia to sit in other judicial districts, this list including many designations of you made by former Gov. Harry F. Byrd.

That was followed by your own testimony.

The privilege of making the closing and sole arguments against you was accorded to the two Senators from Virginia.

Senator Glass stated that neither he nor his colleague had formally or definitely made any statement affecting your capabilities.

He proceeded to review the newspaper reports of last March, stated that he had not communicated with the Governor to ascertain whether or not the latter had authorized the publication, and spoke of his letter to me. He went on to state that the President had not answered his question up to this date, except by sending the nomination to the Senate.

You will recognize from what I have written you that as far back as last March, in reply to Senator Glass' letters, I told him categorically that I never answered any questions relating to the credibility or otherwise of newspaper articles or editorials, and I asked him to forget the newspaper article altogether. Therefore, the statement of Senator Glass to the committee does not square with the facts.

Continuing, the senior Senator from Virginia referred to other newspaper articles which spoke of "rebukes" to the Senators. It is almost needless for me to suggest that neither you nor I pay any attention to such excuses. Finally, Senator Glass stated: "as a matter of fact, the President of the United States did give the Governor of Virginia the veto power over nominations made by the two Virginia United States Senators." I am sorry, in view of my long personal friendship for the senior Senator, that he has made any such statement, and I can only excuse it on the ground of anger or forgetfulness.

At the end of his speech, Senator Glass says: "Mr. Cummings never had the slightest idea of giving consideration to the recommendations of the two Virginia Senators because the Governor of Virginia had been promised the right of veto on nominations that they made." Neither of these statements is true.

Senator Glass was followed by Senator Byrd who stated that your nomination was personally offensive to both Senators, in fact, "personally obnoxious."

At the very close of the Judiciary Committee hearing Gov. Price stated: "Senator Glass has made a charge against me. He is entirely mistaken about it." The Governor further stated that he was not involved in the newspaper story.

The committee thereupon abruptly closed the hearing and went into executive session, with the result, as you know, that your nomination was reported adversely to the Senate.

This brief history repeats several episodes in the history of the United States, which have occurred from time to time during the past 150 years. In other cases nominations by former Presidents of men of outstanding ability and character have been denied confirmation by the Senate, not on the plea that they were unfitted for office but on the sole ground that they were personally obnoxious to the Senator or Senators from the State from which they came.

During this whole period Presidents have recognized that the constitutional procedure is for a President to receive advice, i. e., recommendations, from Senators.

Presidents have also properly received advice, i. e., recommendations, from such other sources as they saw fit.

Thereupon Presidents have decided on nominations in accordance with their best judgment—and in most cases basing their judgment on the character and ability of the nominee. In many cases, of course, the recommendations of Senators have been followed by Presidents in making the nominations.

Thereupon, under the Constitution, the Senate as a whole—not the Senators from one State—has the duty of either confirming or rejecting the nomination.

It is, of course, clear that it was the intention of the Constitution of the United States to vest in the Senate as a whole the duty of rejecting or confirming solely on the ground of the fitness of the nominee.

Had it been otherwise, had the Constitution intended to give the right of veto to a Senator or two Senators from the State of the nominee, it would have said so. Or to put it another way, it would have vested the nominating power in the Senators from the State in which the vacancy existed.

On somewhat rare occasions the Senate, relying on an unwritten rule of Senatorial courtesy, which exists in no place in the Constitution, has rejected nominees on the ground of their being personally obnoxious to their Senators, thus vesting in individual Senators what amounts in effect to the power of nomination.

In the particular case of which you are the unfortunate and innocent victim, the Senators from Virginia have in effect said to the President—"We have nominated to you two candidates acceptable to us; you are hereby directed to nominate one of our two candidates, and if you do not we will reject the nomination of anybody else selected by you, however fit he may be."

Perhaps, my dear Judge Roberts, the rejection of your nomination will have a good effect on the citizenship and the thinking of the whole Nation in that it will tend to create a greater interest in the Constitution of our country, a greater interest in its preservation in accordance with the intention of the gentlemen who wrote it.

I am sorry, indeed, that you have been the victim. Against you not one syllable has been uttered in derogation of your character, or ability in the legal profession or your record on the Bench. Very sincerely yours,

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

Honorable Floyd H. Roberts,
